ONE WORLD, ONE NETWORK?

72ND Annual ICA Conference
26-30 May 2022
Paris, France
Founded in 1896, Shanghai Jiao Tong University (SJTU) is one of two oldest institutions of higher learning and among the most prestigious in China. In recent years, it also consistently features in the world’s top 100 universities as ranked by the Academic Ranking of World Universities, the QS World University Rankings, and the Times Higher Education World University Rankings. Established in 2002, School of Media and Communication (SMC) at SJTU has continued the tradition of academic excellence and become one of the top communication schools in China. It has also earned a world-wide reputation with its over 200 international students originating from more than 60 countries.

● ACADEMIC RANKING (on the discipline of journalism & communication) ●

Welcome to ICA’s 72nd Annual Conference

Welcome to the 72nd Annual Conference of the International Communication Association in Paris, France, our first truly hybrid conference! With over 3,400 in-person attendees and an additional 400-plus participants tuning in from virtual locations around the globe (plus 11 regional hubs), this is the biggest and most accessible ICA conference in our history. The Conference theme One World, One Network invites reimagining communication scholarship on globalization and networks. The use of the interrobang glyph – a superposition of the exclamation and question punctuation marks – seeks to simultaneously celebrate and problematize the “one-ness” in the theme.

The opening plenary session, “One World (Wide Web), One Network?” (Thursday evening, 26 May, 6:00 – 19:15, Amphitheatre Bleu), starts off the conference. This panel features four global thought leaders on issues, ranging from the invention - and reinvention - of the World Wide Web to its indispensable role in contemporary society, with Tim Berners Lee (MIT & Oxford), Safiya Noble (UCLA), Siva Vaidhyanathan (U of Virginia), and Nigel Shadbolt (Oxford & Open Data Institute).

New members, students, and all those wanting an overview of ICA, the conference, and our place in the field of communication should be sure to attend the "Annual Member Meeting and New Member and Student Orientation" (Saturday, 28 May, 9:30 – 10:45, Amphitheatre Havane). This session is designed for all members and provides an occasion to raise questions regarding how the association works. It will also include a general overview of ICA as an organization, an overview of the conference, and ways to participate further in ICA. This is your opportunity to interact with the Executive Committee of ICA and help shape the association and its future direction!

Again this year, ICA will feature three special plenary sessions in Amphitheatre Bleu, highlighting the work of ICA Fellows newly inducted in last year’s election: Friday, 27 May, 12:30 – 13:45, Saturday, 28 May, 17:00 – 18:15, and Sunday 29 May, 12:30 – 13:45. The Fellows of ICA are also co-hosting two Memorials for icons we have lost in the past year: the Sharon Dunwoody Memorial will be held Saturday from 17:00 – 19:00 in Regency 5/6 at the Hyatt, and the Elihu Katz Memorial will be held Saturday 19:15 – 20:30 in Regency 15 at the Hyatt.

We also again feature three Plenary Interactive Paper/Poster Sessions (Friday, 27 May, 12:30 – 13:45, Saturday, 28 May, 17:00 – 18:15, and Sunday 29 May, 12:30 – 13:45, all in Havane Hall), featuring over 210 individual papers from all of ICA’s divisions and interest groups and this year’s theme, plus—new this year—a captioned video presentation in a mini-movie theatre in Havane Hall deemed “Cinéma Regional,” highlighting pre-recorded sessions from each of our eleven regional hubs.

The ICA Annual Awards Ceremony and Presidential Address (Saturday, 28 May, 15:30 – 16:45, Amphitheatre Bleu) features the annual awards presentations, announcement and induction of new ICA Fellows, and the presidential address from Mary Beth Oliver (Penn State U). We will also be celebrating all the award winners and Fellows who received their honors during the two fully-virtual pandemic conferences.

New this year, we not only are hosting 27 livestreamed sessions in our main hall (Amphitheatre Bleu) throughout the conference, but we will also have a special Documentary Film Screening (“Making Sweet Tea” Saturday 28 May at 17:00 in Amphitheatre Havane); an ICA Kids’ (and Parents) Picnic (Sunday 29 May, 12:00 to 14:00, LM Patio at LeMeridien); a Black Caucus Reception/”Noirée” (Saturday, 21:00 in Lab 10, Hyatt), and a Digital Artifacts Exhibition which can be viewed online or via VR headsets onsite (Saturday, 12:30 - 13:45 in Lab 3, Hyatt).

In the closing plenary session, “One World (Wide Web), One Network? Part Deux” (Monday, 30 May, 18:30, Grand Amphitheatre at La Sorbonne), features four global thought leaders on issues, ranging from the invention - and reinvention - of the World Wide Web to its indispensable role in contemporary society. Chaired by Brooke Foucault Welles (Northwestern U), the panel also includes Wendy Hall (U of Southampton), Deen Freelon (U of NC at Chapel Hill), and Jeff Hancock (Stanford U). Please note this is a ticketed event (there is no charge for the ticket, we simply need to maintain a maximum headcount) and will be followed by a closing champagne toast. Please reserve your seat at https://www.eventbrite.com/e/297389107827.

As always, we have made every effort to make the conference accessible to everyone, for virtual and onsite attendees who have various accommodation needs for hearing, vision, or other conditions. Please check the accessibility page on our website for more information on the time and location of AA meetings, the quiet room, nursing parents room, childcare, gender-neutral restrooms, and more.

Lastly, we want to take a moment to thank all of you who worked to overcome numerous funding, logistical, and political obstacles to make it to this meeting. We value your voices and your perspectives. We trust that this diverse programming will generate intellectual growth, thought-provoking engagement, and a memorable experience for everyone, and we hope you have as much fun experiencing it as we had in planning it! Whether you are joining us in person in Paris, online (from the comfort of your home), or from a regional hub, we can’t wait to see you!

Facial Recognition
MARK ANDREJEVIC & NEIL SELWYN
Providing a critical introduction to facial recognition and outlining its complex social history and future technical forms, as well as its conceptual and technical underpinnings, this book considers the arguments being advanced for the continued uptake of facial recognition. Throughout, it addresses a deceptively simple question: do we really want to live in a world where our face is our ID?
August 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4733-8 / £14.99 / €18.90

Everyday Data Cultures
JEAN BURGESS, KATH ALBURY, ANTHONY MCCOSKER & ROWAN WILKEN
“This is a great book. The bottom up, everyday approach to the datafication of culture and society that it takes is much needed. Its diverse examples powerfully illuminate the myriad ways in which everyday life is increasingly cut through by data.”
Helen Kennedy, University of Sheffield
June 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4756-2 / £15.99 / €19.90

The Political Philosophy of AI
An Introduction
MARK COECKELBERGH
“The disciplines of AI ethics and political philosophy focus on many of the same issues, but only rarely do we see the rich history of the latter discipline being used to make sense of the politics of AI. Coeckelbergh provides a welcome exception with this important book.”
Henrik Skaug Sastra, Oestfold University College
February 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4854-5 / £15.99 / €19.90

Being with Data
The Dashboarding of Everyday Life
NATHANIEL TKACZ
“Combining a deep understanding of software, media, and critical data studies, Nathaniel Tkacz’s new book is something to get excited about: both extremely intelligent and eminently enjoyable to read.”
Jussi Parikka, Winchester School of Art, University of Southampton
June 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4520-9 / £15.99 / €19.90

Netflix and Streaming Video
The Business of Subscriber-Funded Video on Demand
AMANDA D. LOTZ
“Amanda Lotz is unparalleled at addressing our most vital questions regarding the global streaming video landscape. With Netflix and Streaming Video, Lotz has also introduced a blog-incubated mode of academic query, as essential, iterative, asynchronous, and disruptive as the industries she studies.”
David Craig, USC Annenberg
April 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-5295-5 / £15.99 / €19.90

Digital Labor
KYLIE JARRETT
“Combining Marxist theory and social reproduction theory, Kylie Jarrett provides a profound and indispensable analysis of digital labour. The book is an absolute must-read for everyone wanting to understand how labour has changed in the digital age.”
Prof Christian Fuchs, author of Digital Labour and Karl Marx

Platforms and Cultural Production
The Journalism Manifesto
BARBIE ZELIZER, PABLO J. BOCZKOWSKI & C. W. ANDERSON
“This book is a compelling and layered appeal for a journalistic approach defined by curiosity and humanity, one that demands we take our audiences seriously and dares us to question our often implicit defaults. It’s a welcome and refreshing challenge to the field.”
Stacy-Marie Ishmael, Texas Tribune

TikTok
Creativity and Culture in Short Video
D. BONDY VALDOVINOS KAYE, JING ZENG & PATRIK WIKSTRÖM
“This book offers an excellent primer to understand the technological, economic and sociocultural drivers of this platform. Through the lens of user creativity and critical platform analysis, readers are enlightened about TikTok’s coevolution with other mainstream platforms and their ever-changing affordances. An eye-opening introduction for students!”
José van Dijck, University of Utrecht
July 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4893-4 / £15.99 / €19.90

Bots
NICK MONACO & SAMUEL WOOLLEY
“A cogent and even-handed overview of automated software agents and how they act as extensions of human intention. The authors situate bots (and their makers) in technical, historical and social context, and pose an important question: how can bots serve the people?”
Allison Parrish, Poet, Bot Maker and Assistant Arts Professor at New York University
May 2022 / PB 978-1-5095-4359-5 / £15.99 / €19.90

Welcome to Paris, France from Local Host

Eiffel Tower, yes of course! But you have to pay a visit to Gustave Eiffel’s apartment and his two wax figures: Gustave Eiffel and Thomas Edison. Actually, Edison came to Paris in 1889 for the Universal Exhibition, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of French Revolution and he offered Eiffel one exemplary of his new device able to reproduce voices. And, you know what? Point 1: Eiffel taped the famous French Republican philosopher Ernest Renan. Point 2: this roll has been re-taped by French National Library. Point 3: one can hear Renan’s important words about this communication innovation... Montmartre, yes of course! But you have to pay a visit to « Musée de Montmartre » and « The Agile Bunny », a cabaret dedicated to André Gill, an incredible 19th century cartoonist – we all know that cartooning the world could be understood as a touchy democratic act. Victor Hugo’s house, yes indeed! You have to visit HIM Place des Vosges and have a look to one of his paintings: The mushroom. Just see that on internet at first, and, for sure, you’ll decide to see it in real... as a metaphor of our present worldwide situation... Musée de la Vie romantique, Place de la République, Museum of Natural History... so many places in harmony with our « communication focus ». Enter in any coffeshops and just have a look, let your ears wander... And, please, end this Paris Communication Sightseeing Tour by a moment in Albert Kahn’s Garden. Education, Peace and Culture were the societal entries of this openminded business man of the first part of 20th century: he decided to build his project The Archives of the Planet with so incredible series of films and photos from all around the world – men, women, daily life, arts. He designed his garden as a concentrate of the landscapes of the world. Albert Kahn’s garden have just been re-opened this month of April after a ten-year renovation. The results? Words are missing to explain the atmosphere, to describe the use of latest museographic techniques for visuals and audiovisuals. Words are so poor to tell what your senses feel among bamboos, flowers, water games. Just « whaoo ». Kahn’s Garden is pretty close a subway station. 40 minutes from Porte Maillot... Please. GO THERE...

To put it more opportunistically: so many places in harmony with « One World, One Network ». Even the place where we will meet for our closing session – the Great Amphitheater of the Sorbonne – means « interculturality » and « communication ». I let you discover why this place is so important for us and for our community. So many places to ramble around with our communication researchers glasses and notebooks... But don’t forget to keep time to attend the so-many presentations, live presentations after the pandemic has forced us to go digital. At that moment of this letter, we must have some emotional thoughts for our colleagues, in Gold Coast and Denver, who could not welcome our community... Therefore, it is a great honor for me to be your local host.

More than ever, facing the societal shocks all around the world – food, health and energy emergencies, migrations, wars, not to mention digital tensions –, we scholars do have to intervene and ACT. ICA conference is thus a great opportunity to discuss and consider innovative ways to exercise this social responsibility together. No doubt, as the City of Lights, Paris is a wonderful setting...

GENERAL INFORMATION

Both our conference venues, the Hyatt and the Palais, are located in Porte Maillot in the 17th arrondissement of Paris, France. The conference sessions are spread fairly evenly between the two venues. The Hyatt and the Palais are connected by an internal hallway.

Hyatt Regency Paris Étoile: Our headquarters hotel (and Paris’ only skyscraper hotel at 34 stories high), offers one of the best views of Paris from the highest bar in Paris, Windo SkyBar. Windo will host several events at the conference, but it is also open for dinner and drinks every night.

Le Palais des Congrès de Paris, a concert venue, convention centre, and shopping mall was built by French architect Guillaume Gillet in 1974 and is attached to our main conference hotel, Hyatt Regency. Be sure to check out the little shopping mall and restaurants on the lowest level!

Le Meridien Paris Étoile: Our secondary headquarters is just across the street from the Hyatt.

La Sorbonne: The Closing Plenary and Toast will be held in the Grand Amphitheatre of the Sorbonne. This is a ticketed event due to restrictions for this historic venue. Check the program for the link to reserve your (free) seat.

Parking: There are two options for parking at the Hyatt (1) at Le Méridien Etoile or (2) the public parking available at le Congrès. Please note that construction in the area surrounding the hotels makes for a complicated driving situation, so it’s best not to drive if you can avoid it.

Service animals and pets: At Hyatt, pets are allowed under 20 pounds and require a 50 Euro deposit; at Le Meridien, there is a 25 Euro fee per day for a pet. Service animals are exempt from these fees.

Business Center: Both hotels have business centers for guest use. There is also a print shop nearby, COPYTOP, which could be used for printing larger items such as posters. It can be found on our curated map of nearby essentials.

Families: The hotels offer cribs and cots on request, and the hotel’s restaurants all offer children’s menus and high chairs. ICA offers subsidized childcare as well as a family room for nursing/breastmilk storage. NEW THIS YEAR, we also have our first ICAKids & Family Picnic on Sunday at 14:00 at Le Meridien Patio. For more information about childcare, babysitting in your room after-hours, and how to access the nursing room, please view our inclusion and accessibility webpage.

Fitness Center/Spa: Both hotels offer Fitness Centers. Please consult your room booklet for access instructions and hours.
Medical Information: The hotel security department is fully trained to handle emergencies. In case of emergencies, hotel security personnel can be in touch immediately with nearby medical facilities.

Hotel Concierge: Hotel personnel can provide guests with restaurant recommendations, directions to specific sites, reservations, and general information about what’s going on in Paris.

Registration: The registration desk, where you can pick up your badge and ribbons, will be in the Palais des Congrès in Havana Hall (Level 3). Registration and exhibit hours are shown in the program grid in the printed program. Our sessions are on Level 2 and Level 3 of the Palais des Congrès, as well as the first (Regency Level) and second (Lab level) floors of the Hyatt Regency.

Exhibits: Exhibits will be located in Havana Hall, immediately behind the registration desk on the Terrace level. This area also includes the Cinéma Regional, food and beverage service, a lounge area, and all poster sessions.

Posters: Poster sessions will be held on Level 3 of the Palais des Congrès, in Havana Hall.

Membership: To join ICA, please consult with any person at the ICA registration desk. We welcome members in all communication discipline from around the globe. You can also join online at www.icahdq.org. Don’t miss out on the significant conference discount that comes with ICA membership!

Opening Reception: Everyone attending ICA’s 72nd Annual Conference is invited to attend the opening reception on Thursday evening, immediately following the opening plenary session. This is the first opportunity (in three years!) to connect with colleagues, remember how to do small talk, eat delicious French food, and make plans for the remainder of the conference. This annual can’t-miss event will be located in Hall Maillot on Level 2 of the Palais des Congrès. An open bar, separate non-alcoholic bars with shorter lines, and light hors d’oeuvres will be served, with live entertainment from a French duo.

Special Events: Special events include several division and interest group receptions following their business meetings. A large number of universities, colleges, and departments of communication will host parties for their graduates and guests. Please check the program grid for information on each night’s festivities.
Continuing Favorites: ICA is again offering childcare this year through KiddieCorps, who provided care for ICAKids in San Diego and Washington, DC (if you haven’t preregistered your child, please ask at the registration desk for more information)!

To Tweet or Not to Tweet? Many presenters are happy to have their talks and content shared on social media, but others aren’t comfortable yet with “going public.” What might be ready for a conference audience might not be ready for The World At Large. The policy of the ICA Board of Directors is that each presenter can and should indicate a preference, and that presenters’ preferences should be respected. To that end, we encourage you to make your wishes known at the beginning of your presentation. Please note that as it becomes cumbersome to include all the social media icons for affirmative or negative requests, one should consider the “no tweet” or “ok to tweet” symbols as referring to all social media.

If you are happy to be the subject of social media posts: we recommend you indicate as such at the beginning of your talk both verbally and on your slides, possibly including your own Twitter handle as well so that you can be tagged.

If you are not comfortable having your information shared on social media: Please include the "no tweets" symbol on your first slide and call attention to this verbally. We also recommend placing the "no tweets" symbol in the corner of any particular slides you wish not to be photographed, tweeted, or otherwise shared on social media (as this both alerts latecomers to the request and makes it obvious if someone does take a photo that they are doing so against your wishes, as the symbol will be in the photo).
CONFERENCE POLICIES

Who pays the conference registration fee? Everyone. ICA is a voluntary, non-profit, tax-exempt organization NGO that qualifies for the U.S. Internal Revenue Service’s 501 (c)(3) tax-exempt status. Its annual conference program is comprised almost exclusively of competitively selected papers. There are very few “invited” papers in any ICA conference program; thus the ICA Board of Directors has established an “everybody pays” policy. That said, ICA does give out over US $60,000 in travel grants each year based on need. If you would like to support travel grants, please consider making a donation or renewing as a Sustaining Member, through which a portion of your dues would support student travel.

Paper Distribution Center: The Paper Distribution Center (PDC) is online. As part of your conference registration, you have been given a password allowing access to a special section of the ICA website. Conference papers will be available in this section for 45 days after the conclusion of the conference.

ERIC: The Education Resource Information Center (ERIC) Clearinghouse is always interested in having papers from the ICA conference submitted for possible inclusion in the ERIC system. Authors may submit papers to ERIC directly: Coordinator of Documents, ERIC Clearinghouse on Reading and Communication Skills, 2805 East Tenth Street, Smith Research Center, Suite 150, Bloomington, IN 47408-2698 USA.

Audiovisual Equipment: ICA makes every effort to provide audiovisual equipment needed for conference presentations:

- Each meeting room scheduled for an ICA presentation will have a screen and an LCD projector, plus adaptors for Macs and PC laptops. The lectern will have cords for both video and audio. Because ICA has 30+ concurrent breakouts at most times, presenters must run their presentations from their own laptops or other mobile devices.
- Those holding non-sessions meetings (satellite events) in other rooms, who have not preordered AV equipment or who have last-minute needs must arrange and pay for equipment themselves through the authorized audiovisual provider for this conference. ICA will not place new orders for equipment once the conference has begun.

Conference Code of Conduct In order to register for the conference, all attendees have indicated their acceptance of the Conference Code of Conduct (it is impossible to register without having done so). Please review this document before your arrival.

CONFERENCE INCLUSION AND ACCESSIBILITY

ICA is committed to creating an inclusive, accessible environment for all conference attendees. Because of the lead time required to accommodate additional requests, all specific requests (ie those not already covered in the sections below as standard) should be received by 1 April. Attendees who have not made advance arrangements for services or equipment can inquire at the ICA Registration Desk onsite. Every reasonable effort will be made to assist attendees onsite; however, ICA may not be able to provide all services or equipment requested after 1 April due to availability/the time required to obtain them.

Please see below for accommodations in place for ICA22, grouped by type of accommodation.

MOBILITY ACCOMMODATIONS

Accessible Sleeping Rooms
ICA’s room block includes a number of accessible sleeping rooms in each of the hotels in our housing block. Please contact Laura Sawyer, ICA Executive Director for assistance in booking into an accessible room, or simply note this need in the comments box when you make your reservation. If you have a mobility-related disability and need to be in the conference hotel and weren’t able to get a room, please contact Laura Sawyer as well*. (Please note that our ability to help with room assignments expires at the end of April every year, when we turn the room block over to the hotels. Please make your request far in advance of this date).

Presentations
Each presentation or session should be designed and conducted with the full participation of all in mind. ICA suggests that all presenters review the Accessibility Guidelines for Presentations from the Society for Disability Studies and take the steps necessary to make all programming accessible to their respective audiences. All rooms will have a lectern with a microphone, a table with table mics for presenters to use (either for presentation if sitting is preferred, or during the Q&A), as well as a microphone stand in the audience for questions.

Getting Around
Both the Palais des Congrès and the Hyatt Regency Paris Etoile, our two venues for sessions, are accessible by wheelchair in almost all spaces (there are a few small rooms that are not, but we have purposely not used these as conference spaces because they are not accessible to everyone). All areas at both venues are accessible via elevator/lift (in addition to the more prominent escalators at the Palais), and both have wheelchair-accessible restrooms.
HEARING ACCOMMODATIONS

Captioning/Transcription Services
Because of the sheer number of concurrent sessions (36 separate rooms at any given time, this year), ICA does not automatically provide captioning for every session. However, we have a strong record of working with individuals who have specific needs to make sure that the sessions they plan to attend are made accessible to them. We have contracted with Wordly to provide simultaneous translation services in the main plenary room (Amphitheatre Bleu), which can be accessed by scanning the QR on the sign outside the room. Your phone will let you choose from over 26 languages to translate the presentation into simultaneously (or, if you have a laptop, you can get the written translation AND—on your headphones—the verbal translation). This is helpful for other languages but also doubles as a transcription/caption service for those who speak English. This capability is also available on a limited basis for those sessions in which one of the speakers has a hearing accommodation. If you would like us to coordinate with your chair to provide Wordly access for a session you are presenting in, please email Laura Sawyer immediately.

Presentations
Each presentation or session should be designed and conducted with the full participation of all in mind. ICA suggests that all chairs and presenters take the steps necessary to make all programming accessible to their respective audiences. Here are some tips for how to make your conference presentation accessible. At ICA, no matter how small, all rooms will have a lectern with a microphone as well as a microphone stand in the audience for questions; even if the room is small, please use the mics to help those who have hearing impairments, and chairs should repeat questions from the audience for everyone to hear in the larger rooms as well.

Hearing Aids
Those attendees with hearing aids should know that the two largest event spaces, the Amphitheatre Bleu and the Amphitheatre Havane, both do have telecoil installed. The A/V staff at the venue have been informed that we have multiple attendees who use hearing aids so that they activate this service.

Seating
There will be preferred front-row seating clearly marked in all rooms as being saved for those with vision, hearing, or mobility needs.

VISION ACCOMMODATIONS

Seating
There will be preferred front-row seating clearly marked in all rooms as saved for those with vision, hearing, or mobility needs.

ICA suggests that all presenters take the steps necessary to make all programming accessible to their respective audiences. Here are some tips for how to make your conference presentation accessible.

CHILD/PARENT/CAREGIVER ACCOMMODATIONS

Baby Feeding/Family Room

ICA has designated a private room for parents and caregivers who need to feed their children. This “family room,” at the Palais de Congrès, is in a quieter part of the building, and has a keyed door and a do not disturb sign to deploy when in use. The room is equipped with comfortable stuffed chairs, low lighting, an ottoman, a side table with a few supplies courtesy of ICA like surface cleaning wipes, sanitary napkins and tampons, hand sanitizer, etc) and a mini refrigerator for storing breast milk and formula. Please contact Laura Sawyer, ICA Executive Director, for the location and instructions for access to the family room. We ask that parents NOT dispose of soiled diapers/nappies in the wastebasket in this room, and to remove those to the restroom (where the trash is emptied more frequently due to higher traffic). Please do not request the key for this room just for a diaper change – there are pull-down changing facilities in the restrooms. Please clean up after yourself (including any spills) and leave the room just as you found it for the comfort of the next caregiver and child who use the room. If you find the room in need of cleaning, please alert a staff member at registration.

Childcare

The availability of affordable and accessible childcare is an inclusion issue that ICA takes very seriously. Now in its fifth year, “ICA Kids” is available for parents in need of childcare during conference hours. To provide this service, ICA is partnering once again with our partner KiddieCorp, who provided childcare for our conferences in San Diego and Washington, DC. More information on how to sign up for childcare is here. The childcare room will be onsite at the Palais de Congrès (precise location disclosed to parents who sign up). For evenings and times not covered by ICA’s subsidized daytime childcare, the concierge at Hyatt Regency Paris Étoile has a babysitting agency they work with regularly. To find out more information and to book a babysitter to come to your hotel room, please contact the concierge, Olivier Mordelet, at Olivier.mordelet@hyatt.com.

LGBTQ+ ATTENDEES

Gender-Neutral Restrooms

ICA has designated gender-neutral restroom facilities at both the Palais de Congrès and Hyatt. These restroom facilities are available for use by all persons, regardless of their gender identity. The facilities will be marked with green door signage. Please help make these facilities and this meeting an inclusive space for transgender and nonbinary attendees by respecting the right of all genders to use any restroom that corresponds with their identity. This means that while there are gender-neutral restrooms listed below, transgender women and nonbinary attendees ALSO have the right to use the (binary) women’s restroom (and transgender men and nonbinary attendees can use the men’s restroom) if they wish as well. No one should question anyone else’s right to be in a restroom; doing so will be considered harassment subject to ICA’s Code of Ethics. If this occurs to you (or if you merely witness it) please contact Julie Arnold, Director of Governance & Member Services as well as Laura Sawyer, ICA Executive Director. (Julie is an ally and Laura is a member of the LGBTQ+ community. We are happy to help.)

- Palais de Congrès, Level 2 – gender-neutral restrooms are located next to Room 251 and Room 241. These restrooms are single-stall rooms with a private sink.
- Palais de Congrès, Level 3 – gender-neutral restrooms are located next to Room 351 and Room 341. These restrooms are single-stall rooms with a private sink.
- Hyatt, Regency Ballrooms, Level 1 – the designated gender neutral restroom on this floor is located near the entrance to Regency 12/Regency C
- Hyatt, Lab space, Level 2 – The designated gender neutral restroom on this floor is located at the end of the hall next to Lab 12

Safety for LGBTQ+ Attendees in Paris
ICA is a diverse and predominantly queer-friendly association, and we have not had any instances of hate towards LGBTQ+ members reported in the past. That said, if you experience harassment or aggression from anyone during the ICA conference due to your gender expression, identity, or anything else, please let us know immediately so we can help and provide support.

OTHER HEALTH-RELATED ACCOMMODATIONS

Alcohol-Related Events
ICA has made efforts in recent years to de-emphasize alcohol as a focus of social events in order to make socializing less stressful for those who are abstaining from alcohol consumption for whatever reason, and will strive to provide clearly marked, additional water-and-soft-drinks-only bars as part of the opening reception and other evening events. Divisions and interest groups, as well as satellite events such as university receptions, are encouraged to provide a non-alcoholic bar station as part of their events as well (however please note that these events are managed separately from ICA headquarters and adherence to this guideline may vary). For those who wish to attend AA meetings while in Paris, please see this page for a list. Please also see below for onsite AA meetings each morning at the Palais de Congrès.

Alcoholics Anonymous (AA)
Room 271 in the Palais des Congrès will be available every morning of the conference from 07:00 to 08:00 for a daily Friends of Bill W. meeting in English. This meeting is self-organized based on who shows up (there is not a designated lead). If one prefers to attend a public AA meeting outside the hotel, those can be found here.

Allergies
ICA requires its venues to label all food provided for our conferences—whether during a reception or for mid-day coffee breaks—with the allergens involved in its preparation. If you have provided your allergy information to us, we have shared that with the venues - however, mistakes do happen so we recommend carefully reviewing all signage and, when in doubt, to refrain from eating something you’re not sure about (particualry if you do not speak the local language where the conference is being held).

Comfort Room/Quiet Room
Room 271 at the Palais des Congrès has been designated as a comfort room/quiet room for use by attendees requiring a respite from the overstimulation of meeting activities. Please note that this room is not to be used for meetings, conversation, typing correspondence, or phone calls. The room is available for Quiet Room use from 8:30 to 18:00 each day.

Exercise Facilities and Pool
Both hotels—Hyatt and Le Méridien—have onsite fitness facilities that should be open 24 hours to guests. Please consult the information you receive at check-in for any changes in schedule.

Fragrance-Free Environment
ICA requests that all participants refrain from wearing strong perfume, cologne or other fragrances in order to promote a fragrance-free environment for the benefit of attendees with multiple chemical sensitivities.

Mental Health and Substance Abuse Hotline
When in France, individuals with a need for intervention and assistance with mental health/suicide and/or substance abuse issues can call +33 01 46 21 4646 or visit www.soshelpline.org. This is a free service.

Narcotics Anonymous (NA)
Regular meetings are held in English at the Saint Georges Anglican Church. Meetings held at 20:00 on Mondays. Saint Georges Anglican Church. 7 rue Auguste Vacquerie (Arr 16) Metro: Kleber or Etoile

Yoga
Due to restrictions and liability concerns in our venue, as well as every available space being taken up with sessions due to the extremely high turnout this year, we regret we are unable to offer yoga classes in Paris.
MEDICAL ACCOMMODATIONS

For those who have medical issues requiring more privacy (such as for ostomy-related maintenance or for insulin injections), we have two sets of single-use restrooms (i.e. a toilet and sink with a lockable door, as opposed to a row of stalls):

- Palais de Congrès, Level 2 – restrooms are located next to Room 251 and Room 241. These restrooms are single-stall rooms with a private sink & are gender-neutral.
- Palais de Congrès, Level 3 – restrooms are located next to Room 351 and Room 341. These restrooms are single-stall rooms with a private sink and are gender-neutral.

GENERAL SAFETY TIPS

Out and About

The area surrounding our conference venue is considered very safe and friendly for women, people of color, and members of the LGBTQ community. Even late at night, the area surrounding the Palais des Congrès is quite well lit, and the nightlife is typically “family friendly.” As with any major city, as a visitor, it is important to:

- Be aware of your surroundings, especially if a stranger suddenly engages you in a lively conversation (often a distraction technique for pickpockets)
- Do not blatantly stare at maps/your phone’s GPS while walking
- Remove your badge when outside the venue/your hotel (the #1 mistake I see attendees making out and about!)
- Take care when crossing the street, especially if traffic goes in a different direction than what you are used to at home!

For other Paris-specific travel tips, please see the safety page for the Paris convention & visitor’s bureau.

Harassment

ICA takes its attendees’ and members’ safety seriously. By registering for the conference, every attendee, exhibitor, sponsor, and speaker has agreed to abide by the Conference Code of Conduct. You have the right to attend the conference without being the subject of harassment based on your ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, or any other issue. If you are being harassed, notice that someone else is being harassed, or have other concerns about inappropriate behavior, please contact a member of conference staff immediately. Conference staff can most easily be found at the registration desk, and will be wearing ribbons that say STAFF (please take care to find actual ICA staff and not student volunteers who may also be working in this area – volunteers are typically wearing round buttons that says “I’m a volunteer!”), and they will find Julie or Laura (below). One may also email both Julie Arnold, Senior Manager of Governance, and Laura Sawyer, Executive Director, directly with any concerns. Information shared will be kept confidential. We will be happy to help participants contact hotel/venue security or local law enforcement, provide escorts, or otherwise assist those experiencing harassment to feel safe for the duration of the conference, and to take action to remove those acting inappropriately. We reserve the right to revoke access to the conference for anyone harassing another individual. We keep a record of all incidents and reserve the right to ban individuals from future conferences as well.

RELIGIOUS & CULTURAL ACCOMMODATIONS

Religious Schedule Conflicts

Those with religious observations that affect their availability for certain conference sessions should enter that information in the “Notes to Admin” comment box in their initial paper or session submission (this information is not viewable by those who are reviewing your work). You can go in and change this even after being accepted, as well, but it must be done prior to the first week of February, as we then close the system to schedule the program. If you are Orthodox Jewish and observe the Sabbath, for example, you may note this in your paper/session and ask that we not schedule you between sundown Friday and sundown Saturday. We can accommodate these requests 100% of the time as long as we have advanced notice. If you missed the deadline to request this, you may contact Laura Sawyer to see if there is anything that can be done. We will work with you as much as possible to resolve the issue.

Special Note Regarding Ramadan/Eid

In Washington DC in 2019 the ICA conference overlapped with this important religious holiday, a situation which could not be corrected once it was discovered because the contract had been signed in 2014 and there was no ability to shift the dates. We have done an audit of all future ICA annual conference dates (which are booked through 2025) and there are no further conflicts with Muslim (or other religions’) holidays in the existing contracting. We will make every effort to consider (and avoid treading upon) all global holidays as blackout dates for the conference in all future contracting, with the knowledge that we are nonetheless bound by the expectation among the ICA community that the conference will occur from late May to mid-June.

Should a Problem Arise While You are Onsite at the ICA Meeting

If you have any problem or negative experience related to accessibility—including issues with housing, sessions, harassment, or any other accessibility-related issue—please email Laura Sawyer, ICA Executive Director. In addition to meeting these needs, we keep a record of all requests and our ability to meet them in order to improve each year; we also provide feedback on accessibility issues to our hotel partners and the cities in which we meet. Please note that a reply may not be immediate given the constraints and demands of our entire staff being onsite for the conference and in meetings for part of each day.

Northwestern Qatar Establishes Research Institute Focusing on Global South

The Institute for Advanced Study in the Global South at Northwestern University in Qatar (#IAS_NUQ) has been established to produce and promote evidence-based storytelling focused on the histories, cultures, societies, and media of the Global South.

#IAS_NUQ recognizes diversities and inequalities that shape our societies

#IAS_NUQ harnesses traditions from the liberal arts, media, communication, and journalism to forge multi-disciplinary and multi-modal approaches that are locally relevant and globally resonant

#IAS_NUQ hosts fellows for local and global research groups

#IAS_NUQ_Press produces multilingual publications and creative media

Computational Methods
Communication Science, and Biology

Chairs
Jacob Fisher, U of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, USA
Frederic Hopp, U of Amsterdam, NETHERLANDS
Felicia Loecherbach, Vrije U Amsterdam, NETHERLANDS
Josephine Lukito, U of Texas at Austin, USA
Anne Fleur Van Luenen, U of Amsterdam, NETHERLANDS

The goal of this preconference is to encourage open, non-competitive, collaboration across communication subfields through a two-day hands-on workshop colloquially known as a “hackathon.” During the hackathon, participants will self-organize and work together to learn new skills and solve problems of their choosing while engaging in discussions about coding, big data ethics, and reproducible research practices. Hackathons provide a collaborative, low-risk opportunity to experiment with new ideas and find potential collaborators.

Eric Fassin, U Paris 8, FRANCE
Alan Finlayson, U of East Anglia, UNITED KINGDOM
Diana Mulinari, Lund U, SWEDEN
Sahana Udupa, LMU Munich, GERMANY

This pre-conference will examine the place of critique in a political moment that poses some distinct challenges to how critique is imagined and practiced in communication and media studies and elsewhere. It will bring together interdisciplinary discussion of the significance of work done under the heading of “post-critique”, alongside reflection on how popular understandings of critique, critical theory, and critical race theory are now mediated and distorted by reactionary discourses.

Communication technologies and empires are profoundly intertwined and their relationship has long been a hot topic for media and communication historians. Held in Paris, this ICA preconference aims to explore the many crossroads between media, communication, empire, and imperialism. It will explore topics such as the history of media and communication research as a form of cultural and scientific imperialism; the history of “media empire,” old and new; media and communication as constituents of imperial power or as sources of resistance; the history and circulation of concepts such as imperial media, media imperialism, media empire, cultural imperialism, and so on; connections between media and communication history and fields such as postcolonial studies, decolonial studies, and subaltern studies; Reminiscences and traces of empires and imperialisms (monuments, statues, etc.). LOCATION: Agence France-Presse (AFP), located nearby in the 2nd arrondissement.

We will focus on activities and interactive discussions among participants to enhance conversation about the ways comparative cross-cultural analyses of privacy literacy can be conceptualized and operationalized in novel ways. Keynotes on the central issues and concepts involved such as privacy, comparative research, and media literacy are followed by interactive sessions and group activities on conceptualization, operationalization, collaboration. For researchers interested in privacy, digital literacy, mediated communication, and their cross-cultural dynamics in comparative research.

For 19 years, the ICA Mobile Preconference has been an interdisciplinary gathering of scholars and practitioners who focus on mobile communication research. This year, we invite our community to reflect on our field’s future. What are emerging trends and practices in mobile media and communication around the globe? What are opportunities, risks, challenges of these emerging trends and practices for individuals and society? How should scholarship develop to continue its relevance, both academically and societally?

In an era that has been termed one of post-globalization (Flew, 2018; O’Sullivan, 2019) there is considerable debate around governance of the global Internet. In particular, multistakeholder approaches have been critiqued as lacking real regulatory capacity to transform the behavior of digital platforms. This one-day symposium will explore questions of sovereignty in the digital environment from international and comparative perspectives. At the same time, there has been a “regulatory turn” (Schlesinger, 2020) in Internet governance, with national governments—as well as the European Union—proposing an array of new laws, policies, regulations, and co-regulatory codes. |

The growth of sports communication research has been rapid and productive. However, the field remains over-represented by scholars in western, English-speaking countries and by a topical interest in the most visible and influential sports (e.g., association football, basketball, the Olympics, etc.). “One World, Many Voices” endeavors to expand the geographical and | topical scope of sports communication scholarship, with particular attention to work featuring the Global South and less familiar sporting activities.

Journalism Studies Division PhD Colloquium
Margareta Salonen, U of Jyväskylä, FINLAND

The Journalism Studies PhD Colloquium brings together graduate students working in journalism studies with experienced scholars in the field. This eighth annual colloquium represents the Journalism Studies Division’s commitment to academic mentorship and is being held as a preconference in conjunction with the ICA 2022 Annual Conference (Hybrid).

Overall the goal of the annual colloquium is to contribute to the professional development of young scholars by giving them an opportunity to present and discuss their research in a constructive and international atmosphere. Participating PhD students will receive project-specific feedback from recognized experts in the field, as well as general career development advice. The colloquium thus provides the opportunity to meet senior scholars as well as fellow PhD students from different backgrounds working on related topics in journalism research.

Covid, Communication and At-Risk Immigrant Communities in Stockholm: Ignoring, Leveraging or Modifying Media Ecologies?
This preconference seeks to provide understanding and critique of how this global public health crisis has been mediatized and politicized using various communicative means to further racist agendas that seep into lives of people with intersectional identities and from the margins.

The sixth annual preconference on Human-Machine Communication (HMC) aims to build bridges and foster dialogues across ICA’s breadth of communication research methodologies, contexts of study, regions of practice, and epistemological approaches as we continue empirical and theoretical investigation of communication between humans and technologies, such as chatbots, social robots, and smart assistants.

This preconference brings together scholars from around the world who work in multiple modalities beyond academic books and articles (e.g., film, sound, performance, computational arts), embracing expressive culture as foundation in communication research. We see multimodal scholarship as broadly embracing human communicative practice and a more diverse and inclusive population of scholars and students. We will explore the affordances of multimodal scholarship and consider institutional support, policy, and guidance for multimodal research, teaching, and publishing.

Social media are visual media. Every day, users upload billions of photos and video clips, and media producers are encouraged to use still and moving images to attract viewers. Yet images are often harder to research than text. They pose methodological challenges in terms of data collection and analysis. This preconference is designed for scholars who are conducting research about visual communication online and in social media, with an emphasis on mentorship and methodology.

This diverse panel addresses “mediated authenticity” from an international and interdivisional perspective that acknowledges the role of non-rational forces in politics. Authenticity—appearing to be true to oneself—is increasingly recognized as an essential quality in politicians who want to make it in the current media ecology. But performances of authenticity—and their reliance on the display of affect, myth, and popular symbols—must be accompanied by other forms of knowledge to be democratically sustainable.

This panel develops numerous theoretical approaches to understand activist logics and dynamics of social movements in digital times. Approaches vary depending on a movement's position, communicative techniques, and digital tools. The papers engage in a dialogue to complement each other and light a different angle in scholarship on media and activism in digital times.

(Paris des Congres)

Chairs
- Maria Leonora Comello, U of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA
- Diane Francis, U of Kentucky, USA
- Parul Jain, Ohio U, USA
- Jeannette Porter, U of Missouri, USA

This session will facilitate discussion around peer writing groups as a form of mentorship and community-building among faculty who identify as part of a minoritized or marginalized group. The co-chairs (Black and Asian early- and mid-career women at different institutions) will discuss their experiences in a writing group that enhanced productivity but also provided mentoring and sense of belonging. A key takeaway will be the opportunity to form writing groups “on the spot” based on interests.

Whether we are referring to the human brain, the family, workplace teams, a college class, organizations, institutions, societies, or international associations like ICA, the notions of connection, collaborative action and we-ness define human systems and explain how they emerge, are sustained and exert their agency. In various ways, panellists reflect upon or reimagine how communication is inevitably implicated in the constitutive and performative realities of human systems, producing unity and disunity often in equal measure.

The notion that communication constitutes organization is ripe with potential to inspire and transform the practices of organizing. While attention to the constitutive qualities of communication has provided increasingly useful ways to understand the complexities of organizing, the aim of this panel is to consider the challenges and potential possibilities of translating these constitutive perspectives into practice. We aim to invite conversations focused on engaging constitutive perspectives in concrete organizing practices.

With misinformation ubiquitous, the current fragmented state of media literacy is problematic. This panel brings together scholars and practitioners who study and implement media literacy initiatives in a variety of roles and contexts and from a variety of theoretical and pedagogical perspectives. Through initiating dialogue between the various corners of the field, this panel aims to begin the conversation needed to render media literacy more united, more prepared for today’s world, and ultimately, more effective.

Respondents

Dominique Brossard, U of Wisconsin-Madison, USA
Ramona Ludolph, World Health Organization, SWITZERLAND
Ruth Stewart, African Evidence Network, SOUTH AFRICA
Soumya Swaminathan, World Health Organization, SWITZERLAND

This panel examines how communication research can better inform public health policies and guide its dissemination. Dr. Soumya Swaminathan, Chief Scientist at the World Health Organization, will lead off with a presentation outlining the challenges from the vantage point of WHO. This will be followed by a panel discussion on the challenges and opportunities for communication scholarship to contribute to urgent public health challenges, such as COVID-19, and to better inform evidence-based policy-making and public communication of science and evidence, more broadly.

In light of a recently emerging critical meta-discussion among researchers on the constitution of public diplomacy, this 2-hour workshop provides opportunities for scholars with different experiences and geographical backgrounds to advance public diplomacy scholarship. In the first part of the workshop participants will reflect on the current and future public diplomacy phenomena as well as on the methods to study those phenomena. In the second part, senior public diplomacy scholars will reflect on the ideas raised during the roundtable discussions. In short, this Blue Sky Workshop will connect established public diplomacy researchers with... emerging scholars in a common discussion to chart out an answer to the question, How do we address together the future challenges in public diplomacy scholarship?

Almost every space a user visits on the Internet seeks to connect them to a broader global network called the “market.” But under a consumer-oriented society and pressures of capitalism, could the Internet look any different? This panel invites a discussion on alternative models for digital connection. How did we get here? Where are we going? Can we move through a different path beyond “connection-as-market traces?”

Diversity, equity, and inclusion are buzzwords of social, political, and professional settings. Yet events of 2020 (COVID-19 pandemic, Black Lives Matter movement) demonstrate how far we must go to achieve these goals. Our panel analyzes the experiences of cultural groups, diverse in terms of race, ethnicity, and/or national origin within the context of COVID-19. Specifically, we will examine discrimination, injustice, and isolation projected on Black/African Americans and BLM activists, Asian/Asian Americans, Hispanics/Hispanic Americans, and international faculty and students.

How is COVID-19 constructed as a global crisis, and how are media implicated in producing it as one? Media have become central to the cultural pervasiveness of COVID-19 by representing it to large audiences, but also because of their infrastructural roles in the social experience of crisis. The panelists will reflect on the construction of COVID-19 in different parts of the world, and on its implications for theorizations of crisis in media and cultural studies.

Many countries are now transforming their responses to the pandemic to “Living with COVID-19” instead of eliminating it. Focusing on how agendas of health communication should be transformed accordingly in the era of “Living with COVID-19,” this panel invited eminent health communication scholars from different continents and will discuss what agendas of health communication should be proactively set to effectively deal with the global pandemic. Additionally, this panel aims to construct an international scholarly collaboration.

This panel argues that the overriding challenge for journalism studies as a growing academic field is to get beyond a narrow, journalism-centric view to instead grapple with broader social, cultural, and political changes developing alongside the rise of the digital media environment. The five papers address different dimensions of the disconnect between the increasingly ambient and blurred nature of journalism, news, and information and the dominant democratic, institutional, and insulated discourses used within journalism studies.

Wide-reaching digital transformations have created a novel incarnation of a human condition that we can think of as a digital “one world, one network,” where interpersonal and organizational life is turned into data and categorized algorithmically. In this era of digital ubiquity, data are abundant, everything is visible, and there is nowhere to hide. This panel explores how we may react—as scholars, as citizens and as organizations—to this increasing hyper-visibility, unprecedented information abundance and aspirations to total certainty. The five papers highlight this state of affairs, and explore the cracks, divisions, and forms of organizational and interpersonal resistance that emerge as a result.

For women of color scholars in communication, networking can open up pathways to survival and success. Networking that attends to the needs of women of color requires strategic mentoring of underrepresented populations. This session brings together underrepresented communication scholars to discuss best practices in networking so that women of color communication scholars can experience true mentorship. We consider the guiding question, “How can networks change the lived experiences of under-represented scholars?”

Supporters of politicians and political causes are increasingly seen—and self-present—as fans. This panel explores four instances of fandom in political communication in the United States, Italy, Germany, and the United Kingdom formed between the current and interrelated forces of political populism and the COVID-19 pandemic. Building on these case studies, the panel contributes to the examination of the premises and consequences of fanization (Gray et al. 2017) of political participation and support.

Intersectionality has been appearing increasingly across social media platforms, in memes, news, curricula, campus hallways, workshops, and scholarly publications. Yet such mainstreaming of intersectionality as a theoretical framework comes with the risk of misappropriation and dilution. Therefore, this panel aims to further the study of intersectionality by re-centering Black feminist scholarship and Black media studies within the framework.

In this panel, we showcase the work of IAMCR scholars that charts and conceptualizes the post-pandemic worlds, networks, and voices of global communication in the epoch of neo-globalization.
Political economy research in communication, which has blossomed since the 1970s in multiple nations, is notable for its strongly white male orientation. This panel’s goals are to survey and critique the critical political economy strand of communications and culture research with respect to gender and race concerns, to identify emerging intersectional research that begins to fill this gap, and to envision the path forward in political economy of communication research that is more inclusive.

Users leave digital traces on the Internet. These data traces can be collected, analyzed, and clustered by institutions or political parties who aim to target specific user groups with specific content. Drawing upon the ICA’s 2022 conference theme “One World, One Network,” we propose to discuss challenges and boundaries of using network data for targeting purposes at the example of Germany’s federal election 2021, focusing on users’ perception of privacy and debates about legal regulations.

- Successful Resettlement, Transition and Healthcare Support in Federal Resettlement and Migrant-Support Programming in Northeast United States (Martine Dherte)
This panel engages with migrant and refugee health researchers and resettlement agency experts in their global and local work supporting communities affected by displacement. Specifically, our panelists highlight how the structural inequities in healthcare, while foregrounded during the COVID-19 pandemic, form the backdrop for the prolonged displacement experience of low socioeconomic status migrants, refugees, and communities in prolonged humanitarian conflict contexts. The panelists deconstruct their research, share their lessons and examine challenges to communication outreach and healthcare access in displaced communities from the DRC, Myanmar, South and Central America in the United States, those living under occupation in the Palestinian Territories, migrant workers in Singapore and the United Arab Emirates, as well as Rohingya refugees in camps in South Asia and resettled in New Zealand.

This panel analyzes the influence of the medium in the performance of different roles; the fluidity of news beats when comparing journalistic practices; the relationship between ideals, self-reported behaviors, and performance across organizations and cultures in an age of social media; and changes in journalistic performance when confronting a health crisis such as the COVID-19 pandemic.

Youth News and Media Literacy in South Africa
Mthoba Chapi, Vuselela-Media, SOUTH AFRICA

Research on trust in news tends to be overly reliant on quantitative surveys, conducted primarily in the Global North, and focused on individual-level factors. This panel incorporates both industry and research perspectives on news practices for and news perceptions of youth. Children’s news producers will join researchers to explore how youth receive and make sense of news and how journalism culture is shaped by the focus of youth as both audience and producers.

When Workers Own the Newsroom: Media Ownership, Journalistic Working Conditions, and the Case of Defector
Caitlin Petre, Rutgers The State U of New Jersey, USA

Journalistic working conditions matter not just for journalists themselves, but for the civic value of the news they produce. Yet despite the recent emergence of a “labor rights paradigm” in the news media field, the framing of journalism as labor has been curiously absent from journalism studies. This panel takes steps to fill that gap, bringing together scholars whose work forms part of a growing international effort to analyze news production as a labor process.

The Happiness (in Journalism) Project is an informal network of researchers, educators, and practitioners from all over the world invested in the mental health and well-being of journalists. We focus on bringing together people from diverse backgrounds and perspectives to share best practices, resources, and jointly pursue grants and publication opportunities. The project is hosted by: Valérie Bélair-Gagnon, Claudia Mellado, Avery Holton, and Mark Deuze. All are welcome.

ICA SPONSORED: ICA Presents: One Podcast Network

This panel, hosted by Peabody winning podcast maestro Chenjerai Kumanyika, features the hosts of nine podcast series recently launched by the ICA Podcast Network: (1) Architects of Communication Scholarship, coordinated by Ellen Wartella (Northwestern U), features interviews with leading ICA scholars sharing their experiences in the field and their lives as academics and researchers, (2) Ask Us Anything, hosted by Mary Beth Oliver (Pennsylvania State U), curates the live Q&A webinar series hosted by ICA President Mary Beth Oliver delving into issues of interest to ICA members, (3) Communicating for Impact hosted by Patrice Buzzanell (U of South Florida) provides guidance on how communication scholarship is applied, often ironically and always creatively, in people’s everyday lives, (4) Digital Alchemy, hosted by Moya Bailey (Northwestern U), explores the transformative work of digital organizers, activists, and academics, (5) Feminist Networks and the Conjuncture hosted by Sarah Banet-Weiser (London School of Economics and Political Science) considers the importance of feminist networks and solidarities in the current conjuncture, (6) Growing up Comm hosted by ICA’s Student and Early Career Advisory Committee presents a range of topics, unique and not so unique, from “Apprentice” to “Zalary Negotiations” that speak directly to the student and early career experience around the world, (7) Interventions from the Global South hosted by Mohan Dutta (Massey U) examines how we develop the habits of listening to the voices of community organizers, activists, and intellectuals from/of the Global South imagining different worlds, (8) JCMC: The Discussion Section, hosted by Nicole Ellison (U of Michigan), Editor-in-Chief of ICA’s Journal of Computer Mediated Communication (JCMC) and her team, circumspects about communication and technology. Their tagline: “Discussion Section: Where the interesting stuff happens.” Last, (9) One World, One Network features the ICA 2022 conference theme co-chairs discussing the 72nd Annual ICA conference theme with their guests.

  - Chu-Chien Lin, U of Amsterdam, NETHERLANDS
  - Sara Huisman Huisman, U of Amsterdam, NETHERLANDS
  - Bennett Kleinberg, Tilburg U, NETHERLANDS
  - Ewout Meijer, Maastricht U, NETHERLANDS

This panel brings together international experts in deception to present new ways to model and detect deception from video, audio and/or text. Presentations include a review of automatic lie detection using facial cues, the type of technology used to extract facial cues, and the theories underlying such systems; work building automatic deception detection models for trial data that integrate multimodal cues from language and visual behaviors; a novel framework for considering how text from social media and corporate documents can be analyzed to identify deceptive communication; and detection from motion-based observation. Use of heuristics and the Brunswikian lens model are introduced as means to narrow attention among a multiplicity of multimodal cues. Panelists will discuss the best ways to theorize and test deception detection methods. This panel is a companion to one on Innovative Theories and Applications of Automated Deception Detection in Computational Methods.

This panel provides novel insight on how news experiences change in conjunction with evolving events and crisis situations. Bringing together journalism scholarship from different empirical contexts including Argentina, Israel, North and Eastern Europe, the panel advances toward theoretical renewal on the temporalities of news use. In so doing, the panel strengthens our fundamental understandings of what news use means, shedding new light on the role of journalism in societal crisis situations.

This panel focuses on the historical nexus between sexuality and media from a transnational perspective. It considers how sexual reform, activism, and dissent have played out in and through a media landscape that traversed national boundaries, from the nineteenth-century age-of-consent debates that spread through the British Empire to today’s #MeToo movement. We explore transnational dimensions of representational and reporting practices, while considering the different censorship regimes that have shaped sexual content across time and space.

The pandemic influenced our communication globally, not only in terms of media production, storytelling, or film industry. It has also pushed new grievances into the world shaped by the pandemic and its unequal consequences. New issues, like mobility, migration, and labor, are amplified by the pandemic and have triggered new forms of activism.
The sexualization of women in media is widespread (e.g., Ward, 2016) and a growing body of research has examined the effects of media sexualization on self-objectification (i.e., valuing the body for its attractiveness to others) among youth (e.g., Daniels et al., 2020). Limited research has investigated effects on other outcomes such as mental health and sexualizing beliefs and behaviors. Furthermore, samples have primarily been ethnic majority youth. Studies in this panel address these limitations.

This panel brings together scholars from Hong Kong, Canada, and the U.S. to reveal the multi-layered feminist struggles in contemporary China. It speaks to broader issues of feminist struggles that are foregrounded by connections in an increasingly integrated world of market, economy, consumerism, and digital activism; simultaneously, it also disrupts the very idea of connection by showing, in a particular region and moment, different forms of subversion to dominant heteropatriarchal ideologies, revealing the discrepancies in feminism informed by histories, ideologies, and practices. We attend to the conference theme by complicating the very idea of one-ness, be it the world or the network.

A Global Model of Media Accountability

Susanne Fengler, Technical U of Dortmund, GERMANY

This panel presents the results of a global comparative analysis of media accountability instruments, actors, and practices in 44 countries, across continents and cultures, completed in 2021. Key results from the study will be summarized in four panel presentations. The fifth presentation suggests a global model of media accountability, thus “de-Westernizing” the study of media accountability. It also explores key contextual factors for developing the media accountability concept in different political and cultural settings.

This panel will discuss the dangers of technology for technology’s sake and the perils of ignoring new technology in learning. When it comes to educational technology, we should be building proverbial shoes, not crutches. We need to use technology that makes learning better, not enables a lesser form of learning. Technology cannot be adopted in learning for the sake of having it, but rather must be evaluated for its potential to meet learning needs.

The study of apps as a software format and cultural object has opened up a variety of innovative methodological approaches (e.g., the walkthrough, interface analysis, infrastructure mapping, financial analysis, etc.). These approaches have helped map data infrastructures and question how apps shape media distribution, consumption, and cultural practices. This panel gathers an international team of app researchers to reflect on how scholars have productively engaged with apps as research objects, and the methodological challenges that still remain.

This panel, drawing from a wide-range of contexts and using a number of different methods, examines news visuals. It does so in a way that tries to go beyond conversations about the impact or effects of news visuals on audiences (what news visuals “do” in the most basic sense). Instead, the panel brings multiple perspectives about news visuals into dialog in a way that tries to understand these visuals as objects that enact meaning through their aesthetic qualities, technological affordances, and roles within journalistic production routines.

Creating a Diverse Global Network
This panel will explore how the Platform Governance Research Network has been developing a system of global collaborators to build platform governance research, promote the sharing of resources, and create stronger connections between researchers and practitioners. This panel will discuss major challenges and barriers in creating a network on a global scale, and arrive at a framework to ensure the guaranteed sustainability of such networks.

Pedagogies of the Real: Media Literacy in the Age of Deepfakes
Joshua Glick, Hendrix College, USA

This panel considers the intersection of technology, expression, and ethics in documentary. Digital manipulation, weaponizing of social media, and the burgeoning commercial value of streamed documentary all amplify long-standing ethical issues. When documentary deceives, it feeds public confusion. Accountability in commercially hot documentary production; deepfakes as teaching tools; the proliferation of synthetic media (deepfakes, shallowfakes, and cheapfakes); and the composition of imagery accompanying Russian fake social media accounts are all discussed.

Friday

The global expansion in platform power, algorithmic processing, and data-driven innovation is generating collateral damage of multiple kinds, including to the health and well-being of the public. Attracting increasing concern, the mental health of children and young people is worsening, due to a multiplicity of pressures and difficulties including, many would claim, the operations of social media platforms. Such claims hit the headlines recently when Facebook whistle-blower Frances Haugen revealed that Instagram kept hidden evidence of its adverse effects on teenage girls. As major companies get excited about the “metaverse,” again thorny questions arise about how to protect the needs and human rights of vulnerable users. Communication scholars are tasked with countering moral panics, transcending polarized debates and gathering robust evidence that can guide the way forward. This session will highlight new research on how young people facing mental health problems engage with the risky-by-design digital environment in distinctive ways, and deliberate on the implications for societal, technological, and regulatory responses. Sonia Livingstone will give a provocation, to be followed by a panel discussion.
and organizations, and through social media. Communication contexts to be touched upon include interpersonal relationships, health, effective teams, and politics. The panel will celebrate the potential for social networks to elucidate important communication processes and how to leverage this understanding through intervention development and evidence-based policy. It will also problematize the potential for social network analysis to present new challenges in terms of data privacy, ethics, and the spread of misinformation. The overall goal is to explore a multi-level integrative network approach to communication science.

Many individuals express a sense of discomfort and powerlessness about digital privacy. Concerns about data protection are accompanied by feelings of apathy, pragmatism, helplessness, or even resignation in the face of surveillance capitalism. This panel of international scholars presents pioneering analyses of digital cynicism, resignation, and apathy from varied settings. It creates a space for discussing the issue and addressing it through targeted interventions. The panel crosses disciplinary boundaries and includes policy implications.

Everyday life is increasingly life with data, a critical theory of which is needed, which takes account of the unequal power relations that shape experiences of living with data and that acknowledges the small acts and bigger possibilities of agency in life with data. This panel brings together communications scholars from around the globe to reflect on key terms that together might constitute such a critical theory: inequalities; infrastructure; intimacy; recognition; and the good life.

Roundtable: Moving the Field of Political Communication Forward in Turbulent Times

Friday
15:30–16:45

Hyatt - Regency 8

Moderator
- Daniel Kreiss, U of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA

Respondents
- Danielle Brown, U of Minnesota, USA
The panel discusses three themes. First, what kind of political communication research is undertaken too rarely, and how can the field develop in new directions? Second, what do recent examples of democratic backsliding, on the one hand, and pro-democratic movements for social justice, on the other hand, mean for the field of political communication? Third, how should the field engage with society? What are opportunities and drawbacks of public-facing academia (but also of more application-oriented research).

ICA SPONSORED: Agenda Setting at 50: Considering the Past & Future of a Milestone in Communications Research

- Lei Guo, Boston U, USA
- Maxwell McCombs, U of Texas at Austin, USA
- David Weaver, Indiana U Bloomington, USA
- Young Min, Korea U, REPUBLIC OF KOREA
- Serra Gorpe, U of Sharjah, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the original Agenda Setting article by Donald L. Shaw and Maxwell McCombs in Public Opinion Quarterly (Summer 1972). The theory it introduced has been ranked as one of the “milestones of mass communication research,” with hundreds of research articles published around the world. This panel, featuring two founders and three more recent scholars of Agenda Setting, will focus on past and future research based on this extraordinary study and the theory it introduced. It also will recognize the important work of Shaw, who died unexpectedly in October 2021. It is a rare opportunity to hear from two of the founders about the creation of one of the most influential ideas in our field, while also spotlighting current research lines by younger scholars around the world.

This roundtable will theoretically and practically conceptualize Public Interest Communications (PIC) to understand its place within activism, communication scholarship and pedagogy, and social justice. We’ll address key questions related to defining PIC, identifying the possibilities of using it to challenge hegemonic understandings of the divisions among journalism, activism, and public relations, as well as between academia and practitioners. Discussion will shed light on how PIC can reorient our approach to justice-driven research, teaching, and practice.

This interdisciplinary panel examines whether and how images matter for justice at times when visual evidence is proliferating in courtrooms around the world, outpacing the policies governing its use. Bringing together case studies from Brazil, the U.S., Israel, and France, the panelists contend that to ensure that justice is equal and fair to all, the law—just like society at large—needs to address the complex mechanisms by which images produce knowledge and facilitate judgment.

This panel centers questions of national culture as they relate to Netflix original television series produced outside the United States. Drawing together scholars from different national backgrounds, the presentations explore a range of issues related to national identity and Netflix original programing, focusing on case studies from Brazil, Canada, the UK, Hungary, and Central & Eastern Europe.
This panel joins scholars examining the movement of images across borders—geographic, technological, temporal and disciplinary. From Haiti, the U.S.-Mexican border, West Asia and North Africa, and the Balkans, these case studies offer novel understandings of digital witnessing and its impact on journalism, politics, the law, and human rights. Bringing a practitioner’s perspective to the panel is discussant Maya Gebeily of Reuters, a journalist, photographer, and writer focusing on trauma and human interest stories.

The preservation of media artifacts commands the attention of cultural institutions throughout the world. The urgency of protecting ephemeral audio recordings, particularly radio, has spurred responses in Europe, the United States, and beyond. Sponsored by the Radio Preservation Task Force, this roundtable assembles international experts to discuss the challenges of identifying and conserving endangered audio for scholars and the public, preserving the history of marginalized groups, and imagining the future of multinational cooperative projects.

This high-density session showcases emergent work and emergent scholars, whose work focuses on how we interact with communication technologies. Work here will showcase both how we interface with technologies to use them (i.e., our actual inputs and devices) as well as how we interface with them as researchers (e.g., data gathering). In 5 minutes or less, each of these great works will let you take a quick look at the latest in how we actually use communication technologies.

We invite researchers with experience or interest in approaching quantitative research with a social justice lens to share ideas, challenges, and inspiration. How do quantitative criticalists contend with the principle of objectivity, engage in operationalization and sampling, and approach other aspects of the scientific method with a social justice framework? How can they work toward the use of data generated for the greater good? These and other questions will be discussed in this interactive session.

This roundtable brings together a global group of scholars to shed light on new trends and practices in global fandom post-COVID-19. From the relationship between mental health and fandom to the “fandom police” and censorship on Chinese social media, the question of fannish disengagement and fans’ behavior in light of allegations of sexual misconduct from their beloved artist, the revival of franchises and the organization of franchises’ pop-ups, this roundtable explores the changes and challenges brought by 18 months of a worldwide pandemic on fandom and fan communities.

This panel focuses on human perception of AI and its influence on decision-making across several contexts, while reinforcing this as a subject of inquiry within the larger discipline of communication. Panelists will address the role that communication science theories and methods play to unpack the link between human perception of AI and decision-making and will specifically discuss: a) the role of individual characteristics, b) message-based approach to understanding AI decision-making, and c) research methodologies.

- Shin Mizukoshi, Tokyo Daigaku, JAPAN
- Araba Sey, U of Washington, USA
- Keri Stephens, U of Texas at Austin, USA
- Mariel Vanden Abeele, Ghent U, BELGIUM

In the true spirit of BlueSky workshops, our goal is to question existing boundaries of the field of mobile communication studies and explore ways to negotiate them to prepare the field for the next decades. Participants are invited to bring short statements on the perceived current boundaries, their meaningfulness, and paths to expand them. The organizers will provide boundary-defining texts such as aims and scopes for mobile communication journals, key handbooks, and manuals.

In a time of relative “communication crisis” in politics, health, and culture, it is imperative that communication scholars make themselves useful to addressing the problems of the world. This panel aims to advance the practice of public scholarship across the subfields within communication studies, and to document communication scholars’ experiences and, in doing so, present models for successfully engaging in public scholarship. Finally, this panel aims to cohere the discussions among communication researchers about public scholarship into a dialogue that pushes the field. The panel offers critical meditations on the role and importance of public scholarship in communication studies’ various subfields and “how-to” guides for enacting public scholarship.

“Очень сложно скрыть твои повадки! [It’s so difficult to hide your habits.]” – т.А.Т.у. “Big Data” now account for a large component of our online experience: From which posts we see and how votes are counted, to recommendations for purchases or whom to follow. Papers in this session explore the use of data to track and provide utility to users, as well as how users cope with the knowledge their every keystroke is being captured.

Media and communications researchers increasingly seek to incorporate creative, collaborative, multimedia approaches to studying and representing marginalized groups, such as migrants. This panel considers the need for engaged approaches to scholarly research and representation surrounding issues of migration. We draw from our research practice in analyzing the potential and limitations surrounding attempts to create new means for migrant voices to be heard.

The scholars on this panel consider which children may be most at risk for problematic media use. To feature this work, this session will be presented as a Hybrid High Density (HHD) session. Presenters are asked to give a brief (5 minute) “teaser” or “pitch” of their work. This teaser does not cover the entirety of the paper but instead highlights the key questions that the work answers. Then, after all presenters deliver their pitch, the session changes to a “poster” (see note) session whereby presenters can more deeply present their work to small groups or in one-to-one discussions with audience members.

Leena Mikkola, Tampere U, FINLAND

This workshop provides a networking opportunity for those who study workplace communication. Workplace communication scholars often focus on the communication practices that enable productive, collegial, collaborative, functional, and/or efficient work environments. Scholars from many different areas of ICA—including organizational communication, interpersonal communication, communication and technology, intergroup communication, mobile communication, among many others—study workplace relationships. Unfortunately, many of these scholars often find their work embedded in one area of the field. This workshop allows those scholars to join intradisciplinary conversations about workplace communication more broadly and to receive feedback on their current workplace communication-oriented projects. The workshop is open to all ICA members at any stage of their career.

Although research indicates that media exposure is often associated with greater acceptance of gender and racial stereotypes, this work has seldom included analyses of racialized gender stereotypes and analyses among youth of color. To address this gap, this panel offers five papers testing contributions of media use to the gender stereotypes and racialized gender stereotypes of U.S. Black, White, and Asian youth. Analyses include surveys and experiments, and both traditional and social media.

This panel presents five contributions that explore the methodological advantages and pitfalls of linkage analysis, an approach that combines content analysis with survey data or log data and allows for an examination of individualized media use. Specifically, the panelists discuss how communication scholars can employ that methodological approach based on individual empirical examples. Furthermore, the contributions present a macro-perspective by discussing theoretical, methodological, and ethical considerations of linkage analysis.

One of the most dominant features of contemporary populism has been the public crusade against “the media.” This panel seeks to examine how journalists and news outlets in six different countries—Singapore, Indonesia, Germany, the U.S., Israel and Hong Kong—cope with hostile populism. How do professional journalists defend themselves against political campaigns to undermine their authority and legitimacy? Which strategies do they apply to maintain the public’s trust? And what may be the implications?

Promoting Intercultural Exchange in Online Communication Classes
Sara Kim, U of Louisiana Monroe, USA
Anastassia Zabrodskaja, Tallinn U, ESTONIA

This workshop aims to introduce methods of telecollaboration in communication classes that provide students with hands-on intercultural communication practice. Telecollaboration experience between universities in the U.S. and Estonia will be introduced, while providing information on specific activities and assignments, expected challenges, outcome assessment, and cultural specifics. Participants will discuss intercultural communication competence, issues faced in intercultural exchanges, and various approaches to telecollaboration. At the end of the workshop, participants will develop a framework of pedagogic tools interculturally informed and student-centered that promote intercultural exchange and diversity.

The globalization of media and data has been imagined by communication scholars through the metaphor of “flow”, a term that connotes the seamless movement, automation, and placelessness of communication networks. The panel introduces the concept of the “media backend” with the aim of approaching networks and place transformations relationally across multiple situated contexts. The papers discuss the entanglement of Brazilian rural school access to broadband with military infrastructuring practices; the politics of data center roll-outs in East Africa and Northern Europe; and the ways in which gig economy workers in India produce experiences of seamless platform operations.

Before COVID-19, ideas of faculty “place” and “presence” were generally well-defined. However, the rapid COVID-based transitions that unfolded suggested these conceptualizations were not only flexible but potentially based on outdated images of what teaching, learning, and college experiences embody. This panel is designed to facilitate discussion among panelists and audience members regarding how our understanding of “place” has shifted and how faculty can advocate for themselves as teaching and learning continue to be reimagined.

It is rare to see scholars collectively reimagine and practice the de-whitening of intersectionality through perspectives from and beyond the U.S. This panel aims to do exactly that. Specifically, scholars in this panel examine gender bias, racial bias, black feminism, and biases against the LGBTQ+ Malaysian community. By analyzing the complexities of these phenomena collectively, the scholars offer conceptualization of de-whitening scholarship through intersectional communication that identifies the nuances of social change globally.

The changes and continuities within Afghan media over the past two decades have stimulated vigorous and multi-disciplinary intellectual inquiry. However, certainties and knowledge are thrown into question with the Taliban regime regaining control of the country. What trajectory will Afghan media take now, at home and in exile? This panel brings together acclaimed scholars, experienced civil society actors/activists, and renowned media practitioners from Afghanistan for a multi-perspective analysis of these questions surrounding Afghan media.

BLUE SKY WORKSHOP: Open Science: How Can it be Feasible for Students and Early Career Scholars?
In this BSW, SECAC members will discuss the benefits, challenges, and risks associated with open science, specifically, its practice among student and early career scholars. Speakers will include renowned communication scholars who have publications regarding or have spoken publicly about the open science movement. We will brainstorm together how to meet these challenges and come up with solutions that match the academic reality of student and early career scholars in the field of communication.
This panel pursues Henry Jenkins’ Global Fandom Conversation that took place on his blog in 2021 and 2022. It brings to the forefront early-career Fan Studies scholars from all over the world to take part in an exchange on questions of globalization and localization of fandom. Using a wealth of case studies from a variety of locations, the participants will discuss patterns of globalization and localization of fandom to assess whether fandom can truly be labelled a “global” phenomenon.

The panel examines the economically profitable strategy of recycling successful popular film and TV texts in the context of a global pandemic that has laid bare the consequences of class, ethnic, racial, and gender inequalities. In particular, the panelists examine popular reboots, remakes, and revivals to study Hollywood’s network of inequality and attempts by audiences and producers to rupture the reproduction of heteronormative white privilege in (re)booted texts.

Systemic Vulnerabilities to COVID-19 Victimization among Journalists: Patronage, Protest, Informality, and Gender as Risk Factors

Saturday
12:30–13:45
Journalism Studies
As of this writing, over half of the journalists worldwide who have died from COVID-19 lived in Latin America (957), far more than the region’s percentage of the world population or recorded COVID-19 deaths. What explains this excessive vulnerability? We explore the working hypothesis that COVID-19 victimization of journalists responds to systemic features of compounded risk in media systems and societies, especially regarding labor precarity, gender, and the political economy of journalism in the Global South.

This workshop will bring together scholars working (or interested) in expanding and/or challenging western-centric approaches in environmental communication research. Internationalization in communication research, at conferences, journals, and other spaces, should go beyond including diverse perspectives, but should engage in exploring collaborative ways of knowing, theories, and methods that build on lived experiences of diverse populations around the world. Using an anti-colonial lens, this workshop aims to open spaces for conversations about a reimagined environmental communication research field.

INTERDIVISIONAL PANEL: Theorizing Disinformation from the Global South

Saturday

What can we learn from the Global South about disinformation? Although disinformation as a topic of scholarly inquiry has recently risen to prominence in the Global North, the phenomenon had been in existence in the Global South for a long time as a result of a combination of historical social, political, and cultural factors. This panel explores theories and concepts around disinformation from different sub-disciplinary angles, from vantage points in the Global South. Rather than merely offering a collection of applied case studies, the topic of disinformation is approached on a theoretical level, using examples and cases from the South to develop and expand our understanding of how and why disinformation manifests, and what can be done about it.

By considering failure as productive space for scholarly engagement, this panel suggests a new way forward for media studies, one which decenters the study of success and the largest conglomerates. Including film, cable, games, streaming television, and digital media, these papers all explore failure’s cultural and industrial impacts. By looking outside the boundaries of how the media industries define success, we reveal how those industries themselves obscure their own failures and maintain normative industrial logics.

Understanding the role of social media platform politics is critical yet getting access to platform data has proven challenging. Beginning in early 2020, a team of academic researchers partnered with Facebook to design studies to analyze the roles of Facebook and Instagram in the 2020 U.S. presidential election. The purpose of this roundtable is to share findings from this collaboration as well as reflect on this partnership as a model for future industry/academic collaboration.

Exclusion and marginalization from communication and media show across different fields: this panel investigates the dynamics of marginalized and overlooked groups and communities in our societies and scholarly communities. Beyond the Right-Left polarization, this panel offers rich and innovative perspectives on different communicative situations and media where all voices expressed are marginalized. The panel has unique and understudied phenomena: positioning Swedish prison papers as alternative media, questioning the power dynamics of scholars’ citational practices for the indigenous knowledge and trans-inclusivity in classrooms, investigating the liminality of migration and podcasts, and finally introducing a scale that helps in analyzing the objectivification of social outgroups.

In both history and media studies, infrastructures and events tend to be considered in separation, or as opposites. This panel proceeds from the opposite assumption: that throughout history, mediated events have relied on underlying and enabling infrastructures. Exploring this theme, the panel presents theoretical and empirical discussions of planned and nonplanned events throughout the 20th century. It brings together media event and infrastructure studies, extending them for the study of media and communication history.

This panel calls attention to non-Western celebrities’ distributive power by examining how the globally networked digital media system has interrupted the domination of West-centric popular culture and practice and how fan networks have constructed a discursive space of resistance, solidarity, and activism in association with current socio-political issues in the transnational context. Panelists employ various theoretical and methodological approaches—including discourse analysis, social network analysis, and economic analysis—to highlight the political and cultural impacts of Korean boy band BTS as a global sensation.

The papers on this panel examine predictors of cyberbullying behavior as well as intervention tools to reduce conformity to cyber aggression. This is a CAM traditional paper panel. In these sessions, presenters prepare a presentation of their manuscript. A total of 4–5 thematically similar presentations are planned (roughly 10–12 minutes per presentation), along with a discussant (approximately 5 minutes per session). The discussant will be asked to respond to the content of each paper and connect the papers to one another and to the broader field.

MAKING SWEET TEA

SATURDAY, 28 MAY @ 17:00
AMPHITHEATRE HAVANA (LEV. 3)
PALAIS DES CONGRÈS DE PARIS
Everybody needs institutional and organizational resilience—not just caregivers! In this Blue Sky Session, we follow up on our 2021 Blue Sky to bring together scholars from different ranks, roles, institutions, and countries. We aim to 1) unpack the acute and downstream challenges of academia brought to light by the COVID-19 pandemic, and 2) formulate transformative solutions to dismantle the continued patriarchal legacy embedded in the contemporary academy.

Sponsored Sessions

Chair
E. Patrick Johnson, Northwestern U, USA

Discussant
John Jackson, U of Pennsylvania, USA

MAKING SWEET TEA chronicles the journey of southern-born, black gay researcher and performer E. Patrick Johnson as he travels home to North Carolina to come to terms with his past, and to Georgia, New Orleans, and Washington, D.C. to reconnect with several black gay men he interviewed for his book, Sweet Tea. Johnson transformed that book into several staged plays over the course of a decade, and the film combines footage from his past performances of the men with documentary moments from their lives a decade after the book’s publication. The film also focuses on Johnson’s life in the South while showing how the men have changed since—and been changed by—their depictions in his book and plays. The film covers the subtle complexities of Johnson’s relationships with these men, with his family, and with his hometown in North Carolina. The film also restages Johnson’s performances of the men’s narrative in their homes, in their churches, and on their jobs, sometimes with them directing him or even participating in the scene. Blurring the line between art and life, the film offers a rare glimpse into the lives of people rarely given a platform to speak and demonstrates how research, artistry, and life converge.

ICA SPONSORED: Black Caucus Interest Meeting/“Noiree” (Reception)

Saturday

21:00–23:00

Hyatt - Lab 10 (Hyatt)

Chair
  Deen Freelon, U of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA

The field of communication is more diverse than it has ever been, and that’s a problem. An analysis of citation patterns in ten top comm journals over the past 20 years being presented at this very conference found only eight (!!!) Black scholars among the 1,011 most cited. This result only shows what we already know: that being Black in communication studies generally, and ICA specifically, can be isolating. If you’d like to make it less so, please come to our Black Caucus Interest Meeting/“Noiree” at 21:00 Sat, 28 May in Lab 10 at the Hyatt Paris Etoile. There will be food, drinks, music, networking, (possibly) dancing, and a signup sheet for a possible ICA Black Caucus that would bring together Black ICAers from across all divisions. Anyone who would feel comfortable in a room full of overeducated Black people is welcome. Hope to see you there. Hosted by Deen Freelon with food & beverage sponsorship from ICA. Please RSVP here http://evite.me/ubn9Gb7m3x

This virtual high-density session showcases emergent work and emergent scholars, focusing on some of the macro-level mediated communication processes, including group, organizational, systemic, and geopolitical topics. A quick sampler of some excellent and immediate understandings of how we relate online at scale.
“You got used to seeing each other sometimes. You got used to showing your face.” ~ Verivery. Technology gives us the ability to filter in and filter out cues, sometimes manipulating the fundamental nature of communicative processes. These papers consider how the channels we use and the cues they enable (or prevent) affect human communication.

Digital Activism and the Kafala System in Lebanon
Heather Jaber, U of Pennsylvania, USA
Social Media and Expressive Identity Politics during Ethiopia’s War
Azeb Madebo, U of Southern California, USA

This panel examines how digital platform affordances serve as mechanisms for the discursive construction of ethno-nationalist identities in the U.S., Lebanese, and Ethiopian contexts as a reaction to a perceived threat to political interests within the nation. These nationalist campaigns foreclose alternative political relationalities and solidarities that are made less imaginable in digital media landscapes that structure social relations according to essentialized categories of difference.

Seeing the Future on the News: Journalistic Visualizations of COVID-19 Measures and Predictions

Helen Kennedy, U of Sheffield, UNITED KINGDOM
Ariel Chen, U of Leeds, UNITED KINGDOM
Chris Anderson, U of Leeds, UNITED KINGDOM
Giorgia Aiello, U of Leeds, UNITED KINGDOM

At the cross-section between visualization, journalism, and the coronavirus, the panel examines news representations of the pandemic’s state and development. We explore how visualizations were used for sense-making in the complex reality of the disease and its probable implications. From death-rate illustrations and journalistic projections on Twitter via “flatten the curve” infographics through to generic visuals emulating “DataViz aesthetics,” the panel deepens our understanding of news visuals’ role in mediating the pandemic’s present and futures.

A Typology of Social Media Rituals
Tommaso Trillò, Hebrew U of Jerusalem, ISRAEL
“It calls me on and on across the universe.” ~ The Beatles. Scholars have cautioned the myopic consideration of particular platforms in our research, as findings from a study of Facebook may not generalize to processes on Instagram. Papers on this panel benefit us all by overcoming this challenge and explore differences in use, measurement, and outcomes across multiple social media platforms.

The antivaccination movement (also the “antivax movement”) is arguably becoming a global communication concern. By diverting public attention from practices of mishandling the crisis, the conspiratorial discourses fortify the status quo. To take a step into a theory-building direction and to make sense of globally relevant antivax discourses (and frames in particular), this panel features several case studies; namely Russia, Pakistan, Nepal, United States, and Slovakia.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, school-aged children doubled their screen use as online communication replaced face-to-face interactions and in-school learning. The long-term implications of this shift on the development of children’s media use patterns and well-being remains unknown. These five presentations document children’s experiences with media and remote school during the pandemic, examining their contributions and potential consequences. The results are translated with the goal of optimizing the ensuing technological and educational environment for youth development.

This panel extends the conversation featured in the December 2021 Forum of Communication, Culture, and Critique. Each of the panelists wrote about what opening the door to our Communication-related field(s) might mean in terms of mentoring by and for women of color. Offering feminist theory and critical race theory and pedagogy to address the gap in support and provide ways to push Communication forward in creating space for all to thrive, the panelists will critically reflect on mentoring work and practices and discuss possible institutional interventions. We invite attendees to join us in thinking through how multiply minoritized students and colleagues navigate institutional and cultural barriers in higher education. For those who do not identify as women of color, or mentor women of color, we invite you to think about what you can do. What are the ways in which you can work to make our field(s), our work spaces, and our universities more supportive, inclusive, and vibrant? This conversation is necessary for Communication and necessarily interdisciplinary as we regularly traverse academic units and appointments to do the race/gender scholarship of Communication as women of color.

Ethnographers study people by observing their lives where and as they unfold. But questions of being there and present are made more interesting and complicated with digital media, global networks, and rapidly changing times. This Blue Sky Workshop develops the ICA 2022 theme of One World, One Network?! by examining the opportunities and challenges for ethnographic research in transformed digital ecologies and environments.

In particular, this workshop will examine how digital ethnography methods can serve to overcome artificial research and methodological boundaries between offline and online contexts, between lived experience and digital expression, and between past and present. Participants will have the opportunity to reflect on topics such as how we make sense of digital and non-digital data and how field sites interact with and constitute networks and social worlds.

Although interpersonal communication is a world-wide phenomenon, a majority of published research reports are conducted in the U.S. by U.S. scholars (Afifi & Cornejo, 2020). The ICA Interpersonal Communication Division is similar in representation and aims to better involve scholars from around the world. This roundtable discussion brings together division leaders as well as division members from around the world to identify ways in which the division can build bridges within our international interpersonal community.

The Migration of Celebrity Capital and Social Capital in Celebrity Advocacy: The Case of #MeToo
The popularity of the #MeToo movement shows how women around the world still face violence, misogyny, and masculine supremacy. The panel explores dynamics of discursive construction in user-generated content, the visibility of activist feminism, the impunity of marital rape, and the interlinkages between celebrity capital and advocacy. Using rich and diverse theoretical entry points, the studies range from India to Sweden, and analyze different social media, including TikTok and Twitter.

Much research in the tradition of critical theory directs us toward the need for alternative democratic futures that can deliver media/data justice. This panel will discuss how this has been imagined through the concept of the “commons” (as communications, data, and media commons) and the political philosophical and theoretical issues these give rise to. Through a critical appraisal of the concept, the panel seeks to advance theoretical formulations and contribute to an emancipatory politics.

This blue-sky workshop invites scholars whose research agenda intersects with questions of digital equity and global social justice to take stock of the state of the field, and explore new frontiers in theories, methods, and scholarly practices. The workshop will engage scholars in blue skies thinking around three questions:

If differences in economic, social, and cultural capital continue to shape opportunities for access to and participation in online networks, can we truly speak about the “one-ness” of networks across individuals, communities, or nation-states?

Are current theorizations about communication networks and globalization able to capture differences in opportunities, practices, and outcomes along geographical, age, gendered, racial, and ethnic lines without sacrificing generalizability and contextuality?

What can historical and contemporary theorizations of global communication networks and North-South inequality offer to new scholarship about emerging technologies such as algorithmic bias, IoT and the gig economy?

Public Diplomacy from Riyadh to New Delhi: Advancing Diverse, Equitable, and Inclusive Public Diplomacy Scholarship from and on the Middle East and South Asia
The field of public diplomacy has been significantly defined by Western perspectives and Global North influences. This panel seeks to open the aperture on theoretical perspectives and practical application in other parts of the world. Participants will explore the state of public diplomacy scholarship on and in the Middle East and South Asia.

This panel seeks to (re)imagine what coalition and network-building for reproductive justice and abortion rights can look like within our present socio-political and communicative contexts. The panel pushes feminist scholarship and theory forward in the Communication discipline by extending it in new directions more capable of responding to reproductive (in)justice and expanding activism around abortion beyond Western-centric contexts.

As game scholars continue to focus on game streaming broadly and eSports in particular much of that work examines the popular and successful, ignoring hundreds of thousands (if not more) of the casual and hobbyist streamers who broadcast to extremely small audiences. Our panel takes a global perspective in understanding microstreamers and their audiences, with discussions on authenticity, community building, social demands, and performance that provide implicit (and even explicit) motivations that encourage microstreaming performance and spectatorship.

We pair research on traditional media at the Games with investigations of media activism to ask: How do the Olympics shape—and how are they shaped by—media discourses on pressing political and cultural issues? How do certain stories emerge as dominant narratives about the Olympic host city, country, culture, or context; and why are others marginalized?

“If You Entrust Me with the Presidency, …” The Deontics of Campaign Proposals in U.S.A.
From President Mao’s private discourse to the Holocaust and its representation, via a stop at the U.S. campaign and Senate, questions of questions, morality, persuasion, and exploitation are presented in this panel.

In this panel, scholars from three continents use contemporary news content to examine the works of classic postmodern violence and gender theorists. The papers ask whether the classic works can be related to issues of gender and violence in journalism in today’s global south, how they relate to new, local voices, and whether they can be used as frameworks through which to discuss, understand, or re-vision notions of violence and gender in current contexts.

PARTNER PANEL (NEW!): Institute of General Semantics - What is Going on with General Semantics and the IGS in 2022

Sponsored Sessions

Chair
Lance Strate, Fordham U, USA

Respondents
Nora Bateson, International Bateson Institute, SWEDEN
General semantics has had a profound influence on the field of communication, especially during the mid-20th century, as well as contributing to the formation of systems theory and the formalization of media ecology. While specific references to and acknowledgement of general semantics have declined in recent decades, academic work relating to general semantics has continued. Moreover, the Institute of General Semantics has become increasingly more associated with communication scholarship, with activities including a revived book publishing program, publication of the journal ETC, lectures and other live events, and affiliation with a variety of organizations, most recently ICA. This program serves as an introduction to the IGS today, its activities and opportunities, and the state of the discipline.

What does entrepreneurship entail in terms of designing, launching, and running new projects? This panel aims to address this question by studying entrepreneuring as the communicative practice of relation work. This panel brings together junior and senior scholars from various parts of the world who will offer valuable insights into the theoretical, methodological, and cultural/contextual complexities of investigating this subject.
data ownership monopolies and outline possible data literacy paths for citizens to empower themselves. The panel combines critical data studies, activism scholarship, and communication for social justice and equality.

Lindsey Bier, U of Southern California, USA

This panel will foster discussion about cross-boundary research investigating international and intercultural communication in the COVID-19 era. It seeks to explore ideological diversity and critical reflections about data quality within post-positivist and interpretive paradigms, spanning qualitative, quantitative, and mixed-method approaches. It will highlight practitioner-directed research to provide best practices for testing and developing theory. The panel will interest those studying international and intercultural communication, public diplomacy, nation branding, political and health communication, and global media.

This panel addresses the role that metaphors play in our understanding of journalism. Each presentation covers a specific metaphor or group of metaphors in common use in journalistic practice, journalism scholarship, or both. The focus is on the relevance (or lack thereof) of the metaphor(s) in our contemporary context of digitalization, democratic erosion, social inequality, and business model crisis—and on how holding on to the metaphor(s) may impede our ability to critically analyze contemporary journalism.

This panel grapples with platformization and its consequences for organizing work and social movements. Presentations shed light on the conditions of hundreds of millions of humans conducting largely invisible work through online platforms by discussing employment opportunities, legislative discourse, and workers’ perceptions of their job conditions under algorithmic management. Presenters aim to contribute to efforts to untangle important dynamics of platforms, specifically integrating power and visibility aspects of platforms from legislative, organizational, and societal perspectives.

Discourses on Economic Inequality in Digital Media Ecologies: Towards a Research Agenda for the Next Five Years
Michael Vaughan, Freie U Berlin, GERMANY
David Schieferdecker, Freie U Berlin, GERMANY

High and rising levels of economic inequality are a core challenge for democracies. Communication scholarship is pivotal to describe the emergence and nature of discourses on economic inequality and their effects on public opinion. Prior literature has described frame building in traditional news coverage as well as mobilization around the issue by social movements. What is missing is a systematic reflection on the nature and effects of discourses on economic inequality in digital networked publics. In this workshop, we aim to identify the... greatest puzzles for communication-based economic inequality research in digital media ecologies. Optimally, we aim to form a collective to author an authoritative literature synthesis that integrates existing literature to develop a genuine communication research agenda for the next five years.

The definition of public diplomacy has grown to include more than political efforts by traditional states to further foreign policy agendas. Other institutions and organizations deploy public diplomacy tools for purposes political, commercial, and economic. This session will explore national branding efforts and the deployment of public diplomacy tools by entities other than traditional nation states.

This panel discusses approaches and tools that address a critical challenge in our field: measuring media exposure and media use in a changing landscape. We pay attention to self-reports and tracking studies in a wide variety of contexts (e.g., news, health, politics, entertainment). Topics include the measurement of exposure to both “traditional” media in old and new environments, and new media, including digital platforms, messaging applications, and new technologies.

This roundtable illuminates issues of marginality and inclusivity as “processes” integral to contemporary digital politics. Contributions from an international, intersectional, and interdisciplinary group of scholars will introduce three levels of analysis: citizens; organizations; and changing political, technological, and economic contexts. Thus, this roundtable advances frameworks that illustrate the complex interactions of local relational infrastructures and global and state capital, as “continuing processes” where power and control are continually exercised, asserted, reinforced, and challenged.

How Female YouTubers Are Reshaping Journalism and Gender Discourse in Colombia
Emerging labor categories on media platforms confound traditional representations of gender in the media. But before we celebrate overcoming binary gender stereotypes, we must first contend with the varieties of affective labor these platforms demand. On this panel, we encounter female YouTubers reshaping journalism, hip-hop female communities in OnlyFans, femvertising, fashion bloggers and male influencers in China, and the effects of #MeToo production environments.

Presenters offer four critiques of academic and popular post-truth discourse, by extending a) the concept beyond questions of factually (in-) accurate news and information; b) objects of analysis beyond false news claims on social media; and c) mechanisms of causality and effects beyond dishonesty and ignorance. They argue that the perceived epistemic chaos is rooted in demonstrable cultural shifts and power struggles (and not necessarily in traditional questions of epistemology).

The panel addresses various manifestations of journalism’s crises via image-related labor. Grounded in the perspective of journalism as a form of newswork, the panel proposes that photojournalists are the professional group for whom the pressures and transformations of journalism are either more pronounced or are felt first. Five different case studies present divergent trajectories and responses to contemporary challenges to photojournalism in the age of image overabundance.

Growing concerns over the impact of propaganda online have drawn scholarly attention to the power of state-backed media in a globalized media environment. This panel discusses the institutional structures, power, and socio-political influence of state-backed media. Employing qualitative and quantitative methodologies, we explore how American, Russian, Turkish, Chinese, and Iranian state-backed media strategically frame news, generate audience engagement, build credibility, make editorial decisions, and exert soft power in a post-truth and digitized media environment.

- Rachel Moran, U of Washington, USA

Researchers of social justice causes, activist movements, and problematic communities are often subject to viewing and engaging with harmful and violent content with little to no institutional support. This roundtable brings together researchers across subject matters and with differing identities to discuss the realities and necessities of being what we term a “targeted researcher” i.e. conducting research around or within communities and movements that directly attack the identities you hold.

Cross-Country Comparison of Harms of Misinformation on Cognitive Health

Ran Wei, Chinese U of Hong Kong, HONG KONG
Yi-Hui Huang, City U of Hong Kong, HONG KONG

This panel aims to stimulate academic discussions about COVID-19 misinformation, currently a hot-button issue and research focus, from a cross-national comparative perspective. Six prominent communication scholars from different countries (e.g., China, Italy, Singapore, and South Africa) will share and discuss findings from their up-to-date research about COVID-19 misinformation on social media. The panel will provide a rare opportunity to synthesize current research about COVID-19 infodemics of interest to a broad base of ICA members and divisions.

Digital technologies have created new forms of measurement that offer important insights on political behavior, including exposure to news and political information. These new measures uncover behavioral patterns that would be hidden otherwise (improving evidence-based decision-making); but they also have limitations that require solutions moving forward. This panel will offer a discussion of existing challenges and possibilities based on the first-hand research experience of the panelists, all experts in the analysis of news consumption.

The rise of environmental activism, such as the international popularity of Fridays for Future protests, shows the importance of communication in this field. This panel asks questions about how the climate crisis and the COVID-19 crisis interact and affect communication. Highlighting the role of hashtags and influencers, the papers ask how the public perceives and expresses its concerns about environmental issues, i.e. water consumption, carbon footprint, etc. The panel asks if a transnational discourse is possible. The panel features understudied contexts such as Turkey and Vietnam.

This roundtable acknowledges that media worlds and networks are the products of power relations and colonial genealogies whilst reproducing social, racial, and gendered inequalities themselves. Through their interventions, panelists unravel the asymmetrical nature of planetary infrastructures and the ways these are implicated in processes of precarity and resistance. Speakers share a commitment to learn from the South and challenge canonical epistemologies that occlude the lived experiences of extraction, marginalization, and resistance.

Increasingly journalists are facing attacks from citizens, online or in the streets, randomly or in concerted action. This global phenomenon manifests itself in different ways depending on region, media regime, and political environment. Are news audiences turning into the enemy of the press? Our panelists bring together research and insights from Africa, Asia, Europe, South America, and the U.S. and offer an opportunity to compare journalist and institutional responses in different media and political environments.

Security
This panel interrogates five terms commonly discussed in the context of workers in the digital economy—collective, network, precarity, security, and contract. Drawing from the informal economy in different sectors, each paper re-thinks a particular term in relation to feminist and post-colonial discourses, in the process attempting to animate them with perspectives from women workers at the bottom of the global value chain.

The last decade has seen the further intensification of the increasing visibility of “ordinary people” in the media noted by earlier scholars such as Graeme Turner. But research has paid little attention to the industrial and production dynamics of this continuing “demotic turn”, including the motivations, experiences, and viewpoints of nonmedia people who come to feature in media content. This panel interrogates some key dynamics of cultural production surrounding media ordinariness.

This panel will examine the right-wing attacks on Bollywood and their implications for popular culture in India. Bollywood’s cosmopolitanism and liberalism are at odds with the Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), which views India as a Hindu nation. Since coming to power, the BJP government has harassed filmmakers with tax raids, smear campaigns, and online trolling. Panelists will discuss the ramifications of such right-wing hostilities for the future of the entertainment industry in India.

Indigenous Storying: Resiliency and Climate Justice
Jessica Chaplain, U of Utah, USA
Climate activism has been prominent in the past decade, pushed by social movements, Indigenous people, and leading public figures worldwide. This panel brings together findings that highlight different actors or social movements that push for climate action and environmental justice. The core questions in this panel are, How are climate issues framed in the media? How do environmental activists communicate and how are they perceived? and How does the media portray relevant issues like renewable energy? The panel also highlights climate justice as perceived and constructed from Indigenous knowledge production.

Through a proliferation of situated practices that are simultaneously highly localized and distributed (geographically, economically, and culturally), open technologies have made an imprint on our world. This panel explores perspectives on the uneven distribution of risk, power, and opportunity in open technology, in work cultures and labor dynamics, and duly in how open technologies are weaponized by firms, governments, and organizations. Our panelists interrogate the idea of “openness” within global sites of technological production and promotion in the situated realms of layered access, open source machine learning data subcontracting, making open hardware, F/OSS software maintenance, and civic technology.

The Role of Digital Skills in At-Risk Children’s and Adolescents’ Wellbeing

Children, Adolescents, and Media
The panel critically examines the benefits and risks of engagement with ICTs for at-risk (vulnerable and disadvantaged) children and adolescents, including those from low socio-economic status families; refugee and migrant families; and those experiencing mental health difficulties; the panel also examines adolescents’ vulnerability to dis- and misinformation in the context of crisis. Jointly, these contributions challenge generalized assumptions, and fill a crucial gap in the evidence base regarding the role of digital skills for children’s well-being.

Discourse on artificial intelligence plays a particularly strong role in shaping its present and future sociotechnical pathways. Situated at the intersection of media studies and STS, this panel draws on findings from an international three-year investigation of the social shaping of AI across media, policy, and technoscientific research in Canada, France, Germany, and the UK. Contributions present and contrast these ongoing developments and discourses to understand what kind of AI comes into being.

Recent forms of micromobility, such as electric bikes and scooters, often require the use of smartphones, creating a context where mobile communication and networked urban mobility converge in the promise of seamless mobility. However, this conversion creates new divergences and seams that exacerbate uneven mobilities, asymmetric power structures, and existing disabilities. This panel explores these contradictions along overlapping aspects of micromobility and mobile communication in four cultural and socio-economic networked urban contexts around the world.

This panel calls attention to the widely varied, and often competing, understandings of “value” in platform economies. It brings together research on diverse platforms in diverse contexts to surface how these competing understandings across users, corporations, organizations, industries, and other stakeholders emerge and interact. The panel brings together media industry studies researchers to explore these themes of value and influence, against the backdrop of the conference theme “One World, One Network.”

Lessons from Social Justice Intervention in an Urban Housing Crisis: Reviewing Practices of the Media Research and Action Project

Panelists examine the challenges of activist scholarship, discussing the difficulties of sustaining beneficial partnerships between activists and researchers. Contributors explore the opportunities of activist scholarship, including the joy associated with movement building. They will analyze how partnerships with disenfranchised groups bridge the troubling divide between researchers and activists. Panelists discuss campaigns addressing corporate domination of telecommunication systems; state violence through South-to-South “artivist” projects; a collaboration with Arab youth activism; and an urban housing crisis.

This panel features underrepresented groups to study ethnicity and race in/across multiple platforms, such as health campaigns, digital media, algorithms and Artificial Intelligence (AI), and media representation. All papers point at the perils of “oneness”, the role that constructs of “ethnicity” and “race” may play in naturalizing it, and how priming one over the other may... result in the erasing of differences as productive sites to explore the (dis)connections between ethnicity and race.

Streaming services and digital technologies play an increasingly important role in how music is produced and consumed around the world. However, how musicians themselves experience the resulting cultural, technological, and political economic shifts has received comparatively less scholarly attention. This panel draws on both theoretical and empirical studies in Asia, Australia, the Middle East, Europe, and Latin America to provide a first cross-national analysis of contemporary transformations in music industries as understood by music artists.

“Show us your children, your photos, your home.” ~ Adam Freeland. After only about a decade, targeting of ads and information online has become an integral part of politics online. This compelling set of papers explores political advertising and targeting online, with implications not just for now, but for years to come.
“Hate is a strong word.” ~ Plain White Ts. Hate speech is a growing challenge for users, streamers, moderators, and viewers. This session explores how hate speech is perceived and ways we may mitigate some of the most toxic communication online.
This panel addresses the ways that citizens and governmental bodies on national and local levels can realize privacy rights and needs in the face of a growing global data industry and all the “efficiencies” and “optimization” that networked data-based management promises. The panelists detail new efforts to foster citizen understanding of and participation in local data practices and norms. Each brings a deep understanding of legal, policy, and social issues as contextualized locally.

Ethnography raises challenging ethical issues. Researchers are immersed in the field, often forming close relationships with informants. This can lead to complex power dynamics, and ambiguity around exactly what behaviors and activity are being researched. These issues are compounded when those being researched are in precarious employment or sensitive or even dangerous work environments. How should researchers navigate these issues? This panel will explore this question.

This panel focuses on the mediation of the body in the digital environment. The papers demonstrate the ways that embodied users examine coded communication online and how their affective processes of meaning making—that include humiliation, humor, grief, and ambiguity—function as an act of translation of the self into the language of the digital. Through these meaning-making practices, everyday internet users re-examine the self as it relates to others in an ephemeral, hypermediated, digital environment.

Algorithmic Culture in Digital Fandom: Data Fan Practices and Fragmented Fan Community in the Chinese Pop Music Idol Industry
Christine Choy, Hang Seng U of Hong Kong, HONG KONG
Charlotte Hiu Ping Yip, Hang Seng U of Hong Kong, HONG KONG

This panel seeks to trace the latest trend of Chinese youth culture in the era of digitalization and China’s rising. The five panelists’ topics range from digital fan culture, and the nationalist movement tinctured by state governance, to the subculture of youth frustration and negative rebellion. The panel especially focuses on the state-youth relationship, and how youth negotiate through the two forces that shape youth culture—state power and market capital power. The panel suggests a non-confrontational and negotiated nature of Chinese youth culture that is not fundamentally about radical political change.

“What’s going on?” ~ 4 Non Blondes. Some of society’s foundational estates have experienced global turmoil and upheaval in the last few years, sometimes due to sociocultural shifts but also due to technological change. Papers in this session explore the state of journalism and religious identity in a time of change, and how online tools are affecting what have historically been very stable, stalwart processes.

Communication and Technology

VIRTUAL SESSIONS & POSTERS (online)

Chair: Rebecca Hayes, Illinois State U, USA

Discussant:

- Axel Bruns, Queensland U of Technology, AUSTRALIA
- Nicole Ellison, U of Michigan, USA
- Brooke Foucault Welles, Northeastern U, USA
- Lee Humphreys, Cornell U, USA
- Katy Pearce, U of Washington, USA

Scholars of social media from varying perspectives explore how the subdiscipline of communication and technology currently understands social media, and the role of both extant and developing theory in research. Social media represent a channel, but also a place and perhaps a culture, complicating efforts to develop bespoke theory and hindering application of existing theory. However, questions remain as to whether channel-specific theory even matters. Will conclusions be definitive? No. Will it be interesting? Yes!

ICA postconference to be held on 31 May at University of Amsterdam. Aligned with the ICA Paris conference theme of One World, One Network, this Creator Studies workshop features the first-ever gathering of international communication, media, platform, and cultural studies scholars, students, and faculty centered on the study and teaching of the competing social media entertainment and wanghong industries (Cunningham & Craig, 2019). Social media entertainment, or SME, refers to a nascent, if rapidly emerging, cultural industry distinguished by a vast and global-scaling wave of new cultural producers (creators, influencers, live streamers, vloggers, gamers, wanghong, KOLs, zhubo) harnessing social media platforms to aggregate communities for cultural and commercial value. Simultaneously, China’s own version of social media entertainment, wanghong, has developed at an even more accelerated pace, as evidenced by the global rise of Bytedance/TikTok (Craig, Lin, & Cunningham, 2021). While operating with distinction from legacy IP and distribution-controlled media industries, SME and wanghong pose a series of critical questions regarding the sustainability of creator labor, practices of creator management and entrepreneurialism, and their role in platform innovation. Furthermore, comprising emergent and multicultural creator cultures, this workshop will focus on tools for examining the cultural influence of creators and wanghong including Instagram beauty influencers; Taobao ecommerce streamers; Twitch and Douyu game players; YouTube, Douyin, and TikTok personalities; Only Fans hosts and Patreon subscribers; and more. The advent of two competing systems reflects how these cultural entrepreneurs feature centrally in the advancement of and critical concerns surrounding platform capitalism and nationalism. The workshop maps the latest conceptual foundations, research methods, key topics, and pedagogy for studying and teaching social media entertainment, wanghong, and creator culture. Hosted by the international array of editors and contributors to the volume, Creator Culture: An Introduction to Global Social Media Entertainment (Cunningham and Craig, eds, 2021), the workshop includes a series of breakout sessions to identify best practices across platform studies, cultural studies, digital ethnography, media management, autoethnography, globalization, production studies, policy frameworks, and more. Outputs are to be determined but may include a special journal volume and/or online or published handbook for faculty, researchers, students, and instructors.

Neural processes underlying communication

Learn how to use cognitive and physiological signals to better understand mechanisms for COMMUNICATION

Visual and vocal communication are essential mechanisms through which humans share information and understand communicative actions. Hence understanding the underlying neural basis for processing visual, auditory and emotional cues, as expressed by cognitive and physiological signals, is vital when investigating communicative mechanisms.
